Nats Score 8 Runs in 9th to Rout Tigers, 8-2

Hudson Wins 5th As Dente's Single, Yost and Coan Homers Ruin Detroit

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Detroit, May 23.—The Nats cut a pretty figure in the ninth inning today, the curvaceous figure "8" that went up on the score board and caved in the Detroit Tigers who had been fondly contemplating the delights of a 2-0 victory.

Just as the Tigers were prepared to adjourn and admire themselves in their dressing room mirrors, the amazing Nats staged their eight-run ninth inning to deliver an 8-2 triumph to Sid Hudson and snatch themselves from ignominious doom.

It came as a blow—a succession of blows, in fact—to Pitcher Fred Hutchinson, Manager Red Rolfe, the entire Tiger cast, and their 4521 constituents in the stands. You couldn't say the roof fell in on the Tigers because Briggs Stadium is roofless, but it gives you an idea of what happened.

Dente's Single Decisive.

The Nats couldn't stir up more than four hits in the first eight innings—and then! They packed seven solid wallops into that ninth against the hapless Hutchinson, and his unhappy successors, Hal White and Paul Calvert.

Towering even above the home runs that Eddie Yost and Gil Coan hit in succession off Calvert, was a fiery single by Sam Dente off Hutchinson's first successor, White. That did it. Dente's swat, with the bases full, drove in the badly needed tying run and also the winning one.

Doom was what confronted the Nats going into that ninth, though Hudson was bravely trying to keep them in the ball game. They hadn't been on base against Hutchinson since the fifth inning, and there was no sign they were going to come up with their biggest explosion of the year.

Coan Starts It

Gil Coan started it, with a single that singed between Hutchinson's legs into center field for his first hit of the day. And then with two strikes against him, Stewart singled over Kryhoski's head. And then Eddie Robinson got his first hit of the afternoon, a single over second.

That blow did Hutchinson in. With one run home, men on first and third and none out, Rolfe sent for White. He loaded the bases right away by walking Sam Mele, previously a two-hit man.

Now it was up to Dente and

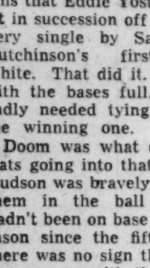
U. S. Urges Citizens To Leave Formosa

Taipei, Formosa, Wednesday, May 24 (U.P.).—The United States today urged all Americans to leave Formosa as soon as possible in view of the threatened Chinese communist assault on this island stronghold of the Chinese nationalists. The United States consulate distributed a circular to all American nationals advising them to get out now unless determined to remain "regardless of possible developments." There are about 220 Americans on the island.

Post Readers Still Seeking Washing Machines



So many people wanted to buy the washing machine which Capt. W. H., of Fort Belvoir advertised in a Post want ad that he had to flip a coin to see who would be the lucky buyer. Within just a few hours after the ad appeared he had made the sale. Capt. H. was pleased with the "excellent response" to his Post ad.

Long-Distance Phone Files To Be Saved for Crime Quiz

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

All telephone companies have been asked to hold on to their record of long-distance calls so they may be examined by Senate crime investigators.

Such records may yield valuable information on the links between big-time gamblers operating in various parts of the Nation. They could indicate the extent of tie-ups between various syndicates and criminal mobs.

The move to examine the records was revealed yesterday when the Federal Communications Commission released a letter it has sent to all phone companies. The FCC noted that the companies now are required to keep toll call records for only the past six months. The letter then said:

"The Senate Committee on Organized Crime has asked the commission to request the telephone companies not to destroy any toll charges for the next few months.

"The commission appreciates the difficulties of voluminous record preservation. However, in view of the nature of the objectives of the Senate committee, we are certain that you will be glad to cooperate in complying with this request."

Long distance call records include the numbers of phones placing and receiving calls, names of those asked for in person-to-person calls, time and duration of calls and charges.

The move to freeze the records was the first act, so far made public, of the crime committee, headed by Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.). The committee counsel, Rudolph Halley, would offer only this comment when asked about the request to the phone companies:

"It's plainly obvious, I think. There's nothing more to say now."

But there was no doubt what

House Votes $112,840,340 District Fund

The House yesterday took 38 minutes to approve a record $112,840,340 District appropriation bill and send it to the Senate.

Representatives Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) and Lowell Stockman (R., Oreg.), chairman and ranking member of the subcommittee that prepared the bill, joined in urging the House to clear the measure without change at the level $6,326,835 below what the District Commissioners proposed.

By a voice vote the House did as asked, after sidetracking an antisegregation rider proposed by Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.). A standing vote of 50 to 19 defeated the Powell move.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), tried later to force a roll call on the Powel plan, but the action was sidetracked.

Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), chairman of the Senate Subcommittee to which the District money bill will be referred, said members of the group will study the House changes in the Commissioner's budget, and later meet to consider revisions. He said careful attention will be given to cuts made by the House. He stated there was no present plan for further hearings.

Representative Bates told the House the District money bill was a good measure, well within expected city revenue, and including a "realistic" 14-million-dollar capital outlay program for schools, welfare and utilities.

Representative Stockman disclosed that funds were included for a mobile police laboratory to be used at the scene of major crimes to expedite solution.

He also cited provision of funds in the bill to cut the firemen's workweek from 6 to 5 days, and for expanding the city water supply system. "There's no reason residents should not have enough water during the long, hot summer months," he said.

Tire Price Boosts Are Announced by 5 Big Companies

Akron, Ohio, May 23 (U.P.).—Five big rubber companies announced price increases today of 2½ percent on passenger car tires and 5 percent on truck tires "effective immediately."

Following the lead of the U. S. Rubber Co., the B. F. Goodrich Co., the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., the General Tire and Rubber Co., and the Seiberling Rubber Co. announced the tire price boosts from their headquarters here.

James Newman, vice president of Goodrich, said that "It should be apparent to anyone who followed the rubber market during the last 60 days that an increase in tire prices was necessary."

Freedom Fair Rally Called For Tonight by Businessmen

A mass meeting is set for 8 o'clock tonight in the District Building boardroom to discuss means of reviving the Freedom Fair.

The Sesqui Centennial Commission's executive committee has recommended cancellation of the 1951-52 exposition, with the full commission scheduled to act on the suggestion June 1 in the Senate District Committee room at the Capitol.

As a new feature of the continuing 1950 Sesqui program, David E. Finley, director of the National Gallery of Art, last night announced that an "extremely valuable" exhibition of paintings from one of Europe's leading private collections will be loaned to the gallery.

J. A. Kamerow, chairman of the Freedom Fair Committee of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, Inc., sponsor of tonight's meeting, said representatives of business, civic, fraternal and patriotic groups will discuss proposals for arousing new interest in the fair.

In an open letter to "fellow Americans," Kamerow last night declared: "One hundred million dollars of business can be brought to Washington in the coming 12 months if you want that business here.

"President Truman said that businessmen of Washington were

5-Year Pact Agreed Upon By GM, Union

Detroit, May 23 (AP).—General Motors Corp. and the CIO United Auto Workers agreed today on a new five-year contract granting pensions and a 4-cent-an-hour wage increase now and each year for the duration of the agreement.

Pensions of $100 monthly, including Federal Social Security benefits, are provided for workers at 65 with 25 years service. Except for the Federal benefits the pensions are entirely company-financed. If Federal payments go up, pensions go up that much.

A cost-of-living formula adopted two years ago by GM and UAW is retained. Under it wages (in addition to the flat four-cent hike) are tuned to the cost-of-living index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics—except they can't be cut more than three cents under present levels. They could go up indefinitely.

The union estimated immediate benefits total 19 cents an hour, and that the automatic wage increases will bring them to 35 cents. It demanded 31 cents in opening negotiations March 29.

265,000 Workers Benefit

There are approximately 235,000 workers in GM plants across the country who get the four cents and pensions. Another 30,000 tool and die workers who are UAW members get all this plus an additional five-cent-an-hour-raise.

The average wage of auto workers currently is $1.65 an hour.

The company said the new contract cannot be reopened by either party during its five-year duration.

Announcement of the agreement which still must be approved by the UAW's national GM conference and rank-and-file membership, came as a bombshell. There was no prior indication it was near.

Only on May 7 T. A. Johnstone, UAW Chrysler director, threatened a strike unless more progress was made in negotiations. First news that the picture had changed came today when Johnstone wired GM conference members to come here Thursday, saying agreement was "imminent."

Contract Expires Monday

The current contract, negotiated in 1948, had until Monday to run. By agreement a 30-day notice would have been necessary for either side to void it.

C. E. Wilson, General Motors president, said, "It is expected that it (the new agreement) will have a stabilizing influence not only on our business but on the economy of the whole country."

Walter Reuther, UAW-CIO president, described the agreement as "the most significant development in labor relations since the mass-production industries were organized." He quoted CIO President Phil Murray as saying it was "amazing—real progress."

There was no show of bitterness, such as marked the end of a 100-day UAW strike against Chrysler Corp. May 4.

"If," Reuther said, "we had accepted Chrysler's original proposals we could never have reached this agreement with General Motors."

The UAW got a trust fund guaranteeing $100 monthly pensions at Chrysler, the same as it had done previously at Ford. A joint board decides on who is eligible for pensions in all the contracts, including GM's.

Besides pensions and the wage increases, UAW got a modified

Note on Germany

Allies Ask Reds Disband Zone Army

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

On the eve of an expected peace offensive from Moscow, the three major western powers accused Russia yesterday of forming an army of 50,000 men in the Soviet zone of Germany.

They charged that this so-called police force was getting basic infantry, artillery and armored training, and was armed with machine guns, howitzers, antiaircraft cannon, mortars and tanks.

In similar notes delivered in Moscow, the United States, Britain and France declared this army could not have been created "without the deliberate approval of the Soviet government" in violation of solemn postwar agreements.

And they added that all Soviet talk of a wish for peace would sound hollow unless the Soviet government dissolved the new East German army "immediately".

The existence of this force has been known and reported from Berlin for many weeks. The three-power protest against it was planned early this month and was approved by the three foreign ministers at their recent meeting in London.

But the timing of it, and the final section in the American note, suggested that one of its objects was to forestall peaceful-sounding overtures from the Kremlin.

Secretary General Trygve Lie of the United Nations is expected here in a few days after seeing Premier Stalin and other Soviet leaders in Moscow. He will bring what will purport to be expressions of peaceful intent, and perhaps of a desire to ease present tensions in the U. N. and elsewhere.

In the Senate yesterday Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) attacked Lie for "selling his 1950

Pedestrian Fined For Not Yielding To Motorist

With a warning that "a motorist has rights in this city, too," Judge Nadine Gallagher yesterday fined a pedestrian $1 for failing to yield the right of way to a driver, after an accident in which he was knocked down.

The victim was Edward Schecter, about 45, of 76 Forrester st. sw.

Schecter, who manages a clothing store at 1812 7th st. nw., testified he was crossing 7th st.—admittedly outside the crosswalk—when he was hit by an automobile operated by Gennie Wright, 938 T st. nw. He was knocked down but not seriously injured.

Wright said he was traveling only two or three miles an hour at the time of the accident.

Shell Explosion Kills 2 Men at Proving Grounds

Dahlgren, Va., May 23 (Spl.).—Explosion of a three-inch naval shell in an isolated section of the Naval Proving Grounds instantly killed two civilian battery attendants this afternoon.

The men were apparently handling the shells at the time of the blast, naval officials said.

Senate Approves Pay Measure; OHE Prepares Layoff Notices

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday approved its own resolution to prevent payless paydays for many District and Federal employes, but the 2800 employes of the Office of the Housing Expediter will all get provisional layoff notices just the same. OHE has 292 employes here.

The resolution was sent to a Senate-House conference. The House is believed likely to accept the Senate version, which prevents funds advanced by it to be spent for new activities and new pay boosts.

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) told the Senate the resolution "doesn't appeal to me," but he conceded it was the only thing that could be done under the circumstances. Chairman McKellar of the Senate Appropriations Committee explained the resolution was necessary to meet payrolls, pensions, etc., through June 30.

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday received the House-approved deficiency bill that carries operating funds for scores of agencies for the remainder of this fiscal year. The resolution merely advances funds carried in it.

The House voted $600,000 for the rent-control agency, a cut of $200,000 under what the President recommended for it. The housing agency will be "broke" in a few days.

Because of the uncertainty over both the appropriations and legislation continuing OHE after June 30, Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods yesterday ordered these drastic steps:

1. That each of the 2800 OHE employes, including himself, be given provisional layoff notices to become effective June 6, or two weeks from yesterday, and,

2. That all employes be placed on either annual leave or leave without pay at the end of business on June 6.

These steps will be carried through, Woods told his staff, unless Congress acts in the meantime to give the agency operating funds.

OHE officials plan to ask the Senate for the full $800,000 as recommended by the Administration. But if it gets only $600,000 as voted by the House, the "pink slips" to about 1800 employes will be recalled, and the remaining 900 will be allowed to become effective.

The agency has cut off about 3000 employes in the past year. A bill to continue rent control beyond June 30 on a local option basis is before the House. Additional

FBI Knows Communists, M'Grath Says

Every Communist in the United States is known to the FBI and other Federal law enforcement agencies, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath declared last night, and "we know of none in the employ of the Government today."

McGrath assured a dinner audience at the Fifth National Conference on Citizenship at the Hotel Statler that "if one is found he will be swiftly dealt with."

At the same time, he added, "we must be equally determined there will be no Gestapo in the United States, and no witch hunts violating the rights of our people."

"There are," said McGrath, "those who, though cloaked in the guise of respectability and patriotism, have through inflammatory speech and malicious publications created disunity even amongst our own people. Paid patriots are flourishing as purveyors of hate."

Without mentioning Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), whose charges of Communist infiltration into the State Department set off a still continuing welter of recrimination, the Attorney General ridiculed "fantastic stories of infiltration in or capture of our Government by Communists."

He assured his audience that "all of you may rest secure; you don't have to look under your beds every night." Federal law enforcement agencies, he declared, "are fully alert and fully in action day and night."

In decrying witch hunts, McGrath declared that the basic civil rights of the individual would be protected by the Government "as guaranteed by the Government." These rights, he added, must be handed down "to our children just as free as we received them."

McGrath warned of what he termed "the wide gap between democracy in theory and democracy in action." The Bill of Rights, he said, is not enjoyed fully by all Americans, and declared that it

Leaders in Trade, Professions, Politics Laud Post's Proposal

Business, professional and political leaders yesterday joined in praising The Washington Post's proposal for a "Commission on National Security."

Governor Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois said in a telegram that The Post's editorial of Monday, "The Road Back to America," was an excellent analysis of the troubled state of the Nation's mind. He added:

"Fighting the cold war in front and McCarthyism in back at the same time is an exertion we can't afford. The citizens commission The Post proposes should be a good medical examining board to diagnose the national malady, prescribe remedies and restore confidence."

Other comment contained in telegrams and letters follows:

Charles Seymour, president of Yale University, New Haven, Conn.: "Warm gratitude for your editorial analyzing the existing confusion in the public mind and for your constructive suggestion of a Commission on National Security."

Dr. James L. Morrill, president, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn.: "Let me indorse heartily the constructive Washington Post proposal for presidential appointment of a citizens Commission on National Security.

"Impartial inquiry and disinterested judgment by men and women of accepted leadership and high integrity can help to reestablish confidence in our Government so essential to the national de-

Junior McGrath Sleuths for His Stolen Bicycle

A bicycle belonging to David J. McGrath, 12, son of the Attorney General, was stolen yesterday in front of the Blessed Sacrament Church, Western ave. and Quesada st. nw.

David was on duty as an altar boy for a 6:30 a. m. mass. He had ridden the bike from his home, 5100 39th st. nw.

During the afternoon, David decided to make an investigation, and conducted a search without benefit of his father's G-men. He didn't get his man, Mrs. J. Howard McGrath told a reporter.

Taft Blocks Aid Bill; Hits At Point Four

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and a handful of party colleagues blocked final Senate action on the foreign aid bill last night.

Earlier the House had overwhelmingly approved the Senate-House conference report on the bill which authorizes $3,121,450,000 for the Marshll Plan and other foreign aid programs. The House roll-call vote was 247 to 88, with 13 Democrats joining 74 Republicans in last-ditch opposition.

But when the conference report reached the Senate floor, Taft announced he would make "a major effort to have the report rejected because of substantial changes and additions."

His target was the Point Four program for technical help to backward areas. Specifically, he was objecting to elaborate language, insisted upon by the House, for fostering private investment

Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) protested that this language was "tripe," and demanded to know what it had to do with technical assistance.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee explained that the House had insisted on this "high-flown language," but that it did not commit the Government to financial help of investors.

"This is just an undertaking to seek agreements with other countries," he said, "that the American investor won't be robbed, hijacked, flim-flammed. What's wrong with that?"

Tempers grew so warm that at one point Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) accused Connally of aiming "sarcasm" at him, and Connally retorted that he would not let the Georgia Senator "insult" him.

Senator Millikin then aimed his fire at the guarantees to private investors in the Marshall Plan section of the bill. He warned that guarantees to businessmen would set a precedent which would be

House Votes Modernized Navy And Stronger Bases Abroad

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The House yesterday authorized spending close to a billion dollars more for defense to start building an "atomic age" Navy and strengthen military bases overseas and at home.

Without opposition and after but little debate, it passed a 350-million-dollar naval shipbuilding bill and a 580-million-dollar military construction measure.

The former would authorize the Navy to lay down an atom-powered submarine, convert a heavy cruiser to a "guided-missile warship" and expand and modernize antisubmarine forces.

Both bills now go to the Senate. However, the upper house already has acted on the base construction bill in different form and probably it will be referred to a joint conference committee for adjustments.

Actual appropriations to carry out both authorization measures must be voted later—probably most of the military public works in a supplemental spending bill this year and the Navy worships next year.

Included in the public works bill are $17,070,500 in construction at Army and Navy installations in the Washington area. Before approving it, the House knocked out 108 million dollars earlier pro-

Philadelphia Suspect Confesses To Contacts

Received Atom Data For Russia from Scientist Now in Prison, Officials Say

Philadelphia, May 23 (AP). A 39-year-old Philadelphia man was arrested on espionage charges tonight, accused of "dealing" with British spy Dr. Klaus Fuchs. The man, Harry Gold, was held in $100,000 bail after a hearing.

Gold was arraigned before United States District Judge James P. McGranery who told reporters that Gold was accused of "dealing with Fuchs."

McGranery set a further hearing for 10 a. m. (EST) June 12.

The hearing was a whirlwind affair, called shortly before 10 p. m. (EST) in the Federal Building in downtown Philadelphia.

A few moments earlier, the Government had announced in Washington that Gold was arrested on espionage charges which were based on information supplied by Dr. Fuchs.

Fuchs is the British atomic scientist who is jailed in England for espionage.

Gave Secrets to Gold

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said in a joint statement at Washington that Dr. Fuchs had turned over secrets about the atomic bomb to Gold.

Gold was described in the announcement as an intermediary used by the Soviet intelligence service to make important contacts in this country.

The announcement said that Gold "has admitted his contacts with Dr. Fuchs and has given a detailed account of his activities."

Dr. Fuchs was arrested in England the first week in February and confessed to passing atomic secrets to the Russians. He was sentenced to 14 years in prison after being relieved of his job as a top atomic researcher for the British government.

Dr. Fuchs Questioned

In London, it was disclosed that two FBI agents questioned Dr. Fuchs last Saturday and again today. The physicist is serving 14 years for passing atom secrets to Russia.

As a British research worker, Dr. Fuchs frequently visited the United States during the war and postwar period. As an official British government visitor he had access to important atomic laboratory work at Los Alamos, N. Mex., and elsewhere.

The FBI said it had learned that Gold first met Dr. Fuchs in New York's East Side early in 1944, and that they had other subsequent contacts in Brooklyn, the Bronx, Manhattan and Queens.

The announcement asserted:

Budenz Could Name 400 Concealed Reds

New York, May 23 (U.P.).—Louis F. Budenz, former managing editor of the Communist Daily Worker, said today he could name 400 "concealed Reds" now operating in the United States. He said that Russian communism is an immediate danger to this country.

"I know," he said, "that the influence of Communists in various key departments in Washington has been great, and was particularly effective in causing the United States to 'pull its punches' in regard to Poland and China."

Budenz, who exposed Gerhart Eisler as a top Communist agent, left the Communist Party in 1945 and now is a professor at Fordham University. He made his new charges in a book, "Men Without Faces," which claims to expose the secrets of the "Little Kremlin" on East 13th st. in New York City.

Budenz described the American Communist Party as a "fifth column" dedicated to the violent overthrow of the United States Government and cited the party's plan for "S-Day"—"when Stalin gives the order for the Red Army and air force offensive against the United States."

He said a Communist plan to infiltrate basic American industries through trade unions is a vital part of their scheme to paralyze the Nation in the event of war with Russia.

"Americans have meanwhile sat quietly by, doing little about such plots and preparations on the part of the Reds. The master key to the Soviet conquest of the United States might well be our own complacency.

"For instance, if I were permitted to, I could name more than four hundred concealed Reds functioning as editorial writers, actors, authors, educators, physicians and the like. I knew them as members of the Communist conspiracy; I was acquainted with them and their records as builders of Communist fronts and undercover workers for Communist objectives." He said libel laws prevented him from "calling this roll."

Budenz said that, since 1937, "an intellectual of some wealth and social standing has directed espionage work in Washington aimed at benefiting Soviet Russia in Asia.

"I am merely reporting what I know and what I saw," Budenz said, "hoping from that to tell the Nation of the immediate danger with which it is confronted. Further self-deception about the intention of the Soviet dictatorship will prove fatal to this country."

Defense Rests

'Secret Red' Is Charge in Adler Suit

Hartford, Conn., May 23 (AP).—Mrs. Hester R. McCullough concluded her defense in a $200,000 libel suit today after giving her opinion that Paul Draper and Larry Adler, the entertainers who brought the suit, are concealed Communists.

Draper and Adler began calling rebutal witnesses as soon as the 32-year-old Greenwich, Conn., housewife left the witness stand. The case is expected to go to a Federal Court jury Thursday night.

Basis for the suit is a published letter which Mrs. McCullough, wife of a Time Magazine editor, accused Draper and Adler of pro-Communist activities. The letter protested the appearance of Draper, a dancer, and Adler, a harmonica player, at a Greenwich concert early last year.

Today Mrs. McCullough testified she hated not only Communists but "capitalistic fatcats," present-day liberals, and New Dealers. She defined a liberal "in the misuse of the word today" as "someone who has leftish affiliations."

She was asked if she regarded the late Franklin D. Roosevelt as an "incomplete American"—an expression she had used to describe some persons whose political opinions she deplored.

"I think President Roosevelt sold us out," the defendant replied. "I think he attempted to appease Stalin."

"The phrase 'sold us out' implies something pretty bad," she was told.

"It was pretty bad," Mrs. McCullough said.

Asked if she hated many of her Greenwich neighbors she replied: a word. I feel sorry for them.

Mrs. McCullough had testified earlier that various neighbors urged her to call off her campaign to stop the Draper-Adler concert. She said she had told Greenwich's first selectman, Wilbur Peck: "You can't sit back like a bunch of capitalistic fatcats and do nothing when these people come here for large fees."

Questioned about her statement yesterday that she regards Adler and Draper as traitors to their country, she said she did not think they were "the kind of traitors" who should be imprisoned or put to death.

"I think I'd try to expose them," she said.

"Would you try to hurt them in the box office?"

"Yes, sir," Mrs. McCullough replied.

2 Men Burned By Ammonia At SE Plant

The injured men were identified by police as James Chanaka, 61, of 3807 Fulton st. nw., the plant manager, and Clarence Croxton, 48, of 431 6th st. nw., an engineer.

Police said they were removing the head of the compressor to repair it when the pressure of a small amount of ammonia inside blew the head off. The compressor is used to freeze ice cream.

The men were admitted to Providence Hospital with first and second degree burns on the face, arms and body.

All Angles of Amerasia Case Being Probed, Tydings Asserts

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said yesterday Senate investigators have been instructed to find out, if they can, why only two persons were fined in the "Amerasia" Government documents case of 1945.

Tydings told a new conference his Senate investigating committee is "running down all the angles without fanfare and without publicity."

The five-man Tydings committee is looking into charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), that the Amerasia case is the key to an alleged network of Communists in the State Department.

Committee investigators headed by Chief Counsel Edward P. Morgan went to the Justice Department yesterday to begin an examination of secret Government documents found by FBI agents when they raided Amerasia magazine headquarters in New York in June, 1945. The magazine is no longer published.

After weeks of investigation, including the shadowing of suspects, FBI agents arrested six persons in mid-1945 on charges of illegal removal of Government documents. Among them was Amerasia's editor, Philip Jaffe, and two State Department officials, John Stewart Service and Emmanuel Sigurd Larsen.

Jaffe paid a fine of $2500; Larsen paid $500. The cases against the other four were dropped.

Senator McCarthy has charged that the Federal prosecutor failed to present a full and proper case to the Federal District judge who levied the two fines after a brief Saturday court session five years ago.

On the House side, Representative Dondero (R., Mich.) told a reporter today:

"The whole case is a strange and mysterious situation. The FBI made the six arrests after days and weeks of surveillance. They gave the grand jury everything, and then found themselves with only two cases.

"It was the greatest repudiation of all time of one of the finest and most efficient agencies (the FBI) anywhere in the world."

However, Representative Hobbs (D., Ala.), who headed a House investigation of Amerasia in 1946, contended that Federal raiders seized the evidence illegally without search warrants and thus made it difficult to bring the case into court.

Tydings discounted testimony that a large number of the documents were marked "secret" and stamped with a warning that unauthorized possession was a violation of the Espionage Act. He said:

"It was a wartime practice to put 'secret' on them, in some cases where there was little justification for it."

Asked whether the committee has turned up any evidence that the case was mishandled by the Government in 1945, Tydings replied:

"As far as I have gone in the study, you could come up with an opinion either way, particularly if you are not a lawyer."

Grand Jury Hears Remington, North In Spy Ring Quiz

New York, May 23 (AP).—A special grand jury investigating Communist activities questioned William W. Remington, Commerce Department employe, for a second time today and called him back for further testimony Wednesday.

Remington has been called a Communist by Elizabeth Bentley, self-styled former courier for a Soviet spy ring. He has denied the charge and recently won an out-of-court settlement of a libel suit against Miss Bentley.

The Federal grand jury also listened today to Joseph North, former writer for the Communist Daily Worker. Miss Bentley has said it was North who introduced Remington to her friend Jacob Golos, whom she described as the head of an espionage ring.

Shaw Named Manager At Hanford for AEC

The Atomic Energy Commission yesterday appointed David F. Shaw as manager of its Hanford, Wash., operations effective June 1.

Shaw, who has served as assistant and deputy manager since the Hanford program began three years ago, will succeed Fred C. Schlemmer. Schlemmer has resigned as of May 31 to re-enter private industry.

Prince Georges Towns Split Auto License Fee Rebates

The final slice of 1949 auto license fee rebates from the State, totaling nearly $10,000, was apportioned among 14 incorporated towns yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

The counties receive one-third of the fee revenue from the State, based on the number of automobiles registered, and half of the county share goes to the towns.

Individual allocations ranged from $132.25 to Glenarden to $1841.75 to Mount Rainier.

Other municipalities included in the distribution were Bowie, $242.50; Capitol Heights, $613.50; Takoma Park, $296; Greenbelt, $733.50; Berwyn Heights, $153; Riverdale, $1049.75; Cheverly, $381.25; Fairmont Heights, $601; Morningside, $285; Cottage City, $174.50; Seat Pleasant, $311.25; University Park, $239.25; Landover Hills, $210; Colmar Manor, $1085.50, and College Park, $1638.

The commissioners at yesterday's meeting in Marlboro also denied an application of A. A. Carozza, representing Carozza Properties, Inc., for rezoning of three acres at 26th ave and Keating st., Hillcrest Heights, to apartment use. About 15 persons appeared in opposition to the application, on which decision had been deferred last Wednesday after a hearing in Hyattsville.

A-Energy May Be Impractical, Official Says

Detroit, May 23 (UP)—A top official of the Atomic Energy Commission tonight said it is "entirely conceivable" that atomic energy may never prove practical for civilian use.

The statement was made by Lawrence R. Hafstad, director of the commission's program for developing atomic power, in an address prepared for delivery to the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Hitherto, it has been generally assumed that production of atomic power to drive ships, cars, locomotives, and the wheels of industry was just a matter of time.

But Hafstad said that while known atomic raw material reserves are about 10 times that of power from coal-fired steam engines.

"It is entirely conceivable that the laws of nature may be such that reactors (machines for turning atomic energy into useful forms) will follow the path taken by the development of the submarine, which seems to have no civilian uses," he said. "Only time will tell whether power reactors are (a) practical at all; (b) practical for military purposes; or (c) practical for both military and civilian purposes."

He emphasized that the AEC is pushing its work on developing several types of reactors both for experimental purposes and to drive submarines and other warships.

He said that since the costs still are prohibitive for industry, the development of the reactors with defense money may solve the basic difficulties and pave the way for later industrial development.

In addition to the high cost, Hafstad said, the needs of secrecy about atomic energy production also hamper efforts to let industry help solve the question of getting costs down.

But to get costs down eventually, he said, "we need the kind of incentive which historically has been given by industrial competition."

Hafstad said that the potential energy in known uranium reserves is 100 or more times less than coal supplies. He said the average cost per kilowatt of electrical power capacity in four "unspecified but large" reactors would be $11,752. The cost per kilowatt from the proposed Navy reactor would be about $14,000.

This, he said, compares with a cost of $100 to $200 per kilowatt for corresponding capital investment for coal-fired steam plants.

Pickets Barred From 2 UP Newspapers

AFL commercial telegraphers, on strike against the United Press since May 1 in a demand for higher wages, have been enjoined by the courts in two cities from picketing newspapers using UP service, according to the Associated Press.

The Pittsburgh Press twice had to halt publication when some of its employes refused to cross the telegraphers' picket line. At the request of the newspaper, the National Labor Relations Board's regional office obtained a three-day restraining order, and yesterday asked the court to continue the picketing ban on the ground that the strikers were violating the secondary boycott prohibition of the Taft-Hartley Act.

In Denver, the Post was granted a two-weeks' continuance of a temporary picketing injunction. The UP bureau in Denver is housed in the Post building. The court permitted a lone picket to be stationed in the corridor outside UP's quarters.

Meanwhile, in Washington, 21 striking telegraphers continued to picket the National Press Building, in which the UP bureau is located, and sporadically picket newspapers and radio stations which use UP service.

Philadelphia Man Confesses Contacts With Fuchs, A-Spy

bridge, Mass., at which time he received both written and oral information which Fuchs provided as a result of his work at Los Alamos. In 1945, Gold again met Fuchs in Santa Fe, N. Mex., and Fuchs turned over information to Gold. The last meeting Gold had with Fuchs occurred in September, 1945."

The FBI, which indicated that it has long been watching Gold, quoted him as having told FBI agents who took him into custody at Philadelphia:

"I thought that I would be helping a Nation whose final aims I approved along the road to industrial strength. Particularly was I taken with the idea that whatever I did would go to help make living conditions far more advanced along the road as we know them here in the United States."

Acted as Ally, He Says

Gold was also quoted as saying he "felt that as an ally I was only helping the Soviet Union obtain certain information that I thought it was entitled to."

The Justice Department declined to say exactly where in Philadelphia Gold was arrested.

He was described as having been born in Switzerland of parents who both were natives of Russia.

Gold came to the United States in 1914 when he was 4 years old and claims derivative citizenship in this country as a result of the naturalization of his parents here. Their family name of Golodnitsky was changed to Gold when they were naturalized, the department said.

The announcement by McGrath and Hoover said at the time of his arrest Gold was engaged in chemical research in connection with heart ailments in a Philadelphia hospital, which the department did not identify.

Gold is single and lives at 6823 Kindred st., Philadelphia.

Some of His Background

The announcement gave this brief biographical background:

Harry Gold attended night school at the Drexel Institute in Philadelphia, the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University in New York City while working for a laboratory in Philadelphia. He later went to Xavier University in Cincinnati and there received a bachelor of science degree in 1940 summa cum laude—or with highest praise. He was later associated with a New York laboratory from 1946 to 1948 after spending most of his time after graduation in New York City.

The announcement of his arrest followed questioning of Dr. Fuchs in the British Wormwood Scrubs Prison by Assistant FBI Director Hugh H. Clegg and Special Agent Robert J. Lambther.

Fuchs, one of the top scientists at Britain's Harwell atomic research station, was arrested February 3. He confessed passing atom secrets to Russia. During part of the time he was in contact with Russian agents, he was working at United States atom establishments as part of a British team.

He pleaded guilty at his trial March 1 and was sentenced to 14 years imprisonment, the maximum under the law.

Miss O'Hara Ends 53 Years As Teacher in D. C. Schools

After 53 years in District public schools, Miss Elizabeth E. O'Hara, retiring principal of the Takoma Elementary School, is still enthusiastic about teaching.

If you want to get her Irish up, try telling her, as a parent did the other day, that "now she can take it easy."

"I don't want to take it easy," she declared yesterday. Miss O'Hara, who is nothing if not emphatic, also set at rest any possible thought that she is happy to be retiring.

She Regrets to Leave

"I regret very much leaving Takoma," she declared. "I like my teachers, I like the children, and this is an ideal setup. I knew when I took up teaching that it was going to be my life work. If I had my life to live over again, I would select not only the same work, but the very same spot where I've been."

Miss O'Hara has been at Takoma for more than 40 years, almost 20 years as principal. She has seen 1500 children graduate.

"A suburban community like Takoma is an admirable place to bring up children," she said yesterday, emphasizing "admirable." "Suburban people are home people, and the children get the home attention they should get."

Question of Delinquency

While Miss O'Hara places the blame for most juvenile delinquency "right in the home," she doesn't feel that working mothers are principally at fault.

"Most mothers go to work for the good of their family," she tells you, "and a great deal of delinquency is in families where the mother is at home, but lacks the interest in children, or the knowledge, or both, to bring them up right."

Miss O'Hara believes present-day teaching methods are "far superior" to the system used when she first began, which she describes as "teaching in the mass."

Born in District

Miss O'Hara, who was born here, keeps house with ("not for") her brother, John O'Hara, retired Government employe, at 5407 32d st. nw.

A graduate of Central High School and Wilson Teachers College, she received her A.B. from George Washington University and is thinking of finishing her work for an M.A. at Catholic University after she retires June 30.

Presbyterians Warn Against Name-Calling

Cincinnati, May 23 (U.P.).—The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church, today began studying reports opposing the practice of loosely calling a man a "Communist" and against manufacturing the H-Bomb.

"We are deeply concerned about the hysteria which fear and suspicion are arousing in the public mind," the report said. "We destroy a man when we loosely and falsely charge 'Communist' or 'fascist.'"

A committee report called for the immediate cessation of work on the hydrogen bomb and all other "weapons of mass destruction." Other reports urged the United States Government to avoid any unilateral action which would tend to sidestep the United Nations and asked the Government to surrender part of its sovereignty so that a "world community may come into being."

Another report stated that "no good cause can be promoted by a practice so evil as gambling," and characterized gambling as "an un-Christian attempt to get something for nothing at another's expense."

Jap Religious Activity High, Baptists Told

Boston, May 23 (AP).—A Baptist missionary leader reported today that a record 40,000 Japanese joined Christian Churches in Japan last year.

The previous top was 15,000 in a prewar year.

The Rev. Dr. Elmer A. Fridell said the Japanese became members of Greek Orthodox., Protestant and Roman Catholic churches.

Dr. Fridell, secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, called on the Northern Baptist Convention—Representing some two million church members in 36 States and Puerto Rico—to back up the church's "Japan Opportunity Program."

He said Baptist plans called for stepping up their educational program in Japan rebuilding war-damaged churches and adding missionaries.

He said the "unprecedented program" would require several hundred thousand dollars extra in contributions.

Dr. Fridell said in an interview the Japanese contribute more generously, according to their means, to Christian churches they join than do Americans.

Dr. Fridell praised the 90 years of American Protstant missionary work in Japan and the 70 years of Baptist labors in that field.

He said Roman Catholic missionaries—who introduced Christianity to the Orient more than 400 years ago—also are doing a good job.

Sawyer Plea

Investments Abroad Need Business Aid

New York, May 23 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer today called upon American businessmen to help solve the complicated problems of foreign investments under the projected Point Four program.

President Truman's plan to aid industrial development abroad "must in large part be financed and carried on by private business," Sawyer told a world trade week luncheon here.

The ingenuity and flexibility of the American businessman in meeting new situations provides "solid reason for hope" that the problem can be solved, the Secretary said.

He urged the businessmen present not "to look for a particular formula which will change the world over night," adding: "people who expect heaven tomorrow morning are not well qualified to wrestle with the stubborn and complicated problems of foreign investment."

The United States will "continue our efforts to negotiate trade treaties with other countries for the purpose of guaranteeing the same rights to our investors in other countries which they enjoy in our own," Sawyer said. But "treaties alone are not sufficient," he added.

He urged businessmen to aid the United States Government in three aims:

1. To convince other countries we are interested in their needs.

2. To help them "to utilize the services, the skills, and the capital they have already at their command."

3. To "encourage the maximum initiative on the part of the governments and businessmen of other countries."

Sawyer praised American businessmen who since the war have tried "new and emerging patterns of private investment abroad such as management contracts, joint investments, and mixed corporations involving both private and public money. He also noted a rapid increased in the number of American firms seeking foreign affiliates for the manufacture or assembly of their products.

The cabinet member stressed that the United States "has no intention of interfering with the political structure or political affairs of any other nation," and added:

"Neither do we covet for ourselves any economic power which could be broadened so as to constitute a control—either in whole or in part—of the government of any independent state. This is our official policy. It is also our rule of practice."

The House Rules Committee refused, 5 to 4, yesterday to clear for House action legislation to encourage American investments in undeveloped areas of the world.

Rules Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) said he will call for another vote at a later date.

Under a new House "antibottlenecking" rule, the committee can delay action only 21 days, after which Banking Committee Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) can call for a House vote without Rules Committee clearance.

The vote came after opponents voiced fear before the committee that such a program would promote the production of merchandise and commodities abroad with cheap labor that would destroy markets for American goods produced by high-paid labor—and thus cause unemployment in the United States.

The bill proposes to guarantee American investments against certain risks, up to 250 million dollars, encountered under the jurisdiction of foreign governments. It is part of President Truman's Point IV program of foreign aid.

The Government, under the proposed program, would guarantee investors against loss by confiscation in foreign countries. It would guarantee convertibility of currency. It would not insure investors against normal business risks.

Spence and Representative Multer (D., N. Y.) said the program would build friends and curb the spread of communism.

Pact to Supply Arms to Iran Signed Here

Iran and the United States signed an agreement yesterday which clears the way for American arms aid to that southern neighbor of Soviet Russia.

The Iranian government was the last of the 13 nations sharing directly in the $1,300,000,000 arms program to agree to the terms on which aid will be furnished.

A State Department announcement said: "As a result of this understanding the United States will immediately arrange for the manufacture or other procurement of military items to be furnished Iran."

Iran shares a $27,640,000 fund with South Korea and the Philippines. The Iranian share has not been officially disclosed but is understood to be more than 10 million dollars. An Iranian military mission has been in this country for several weeks arranging for the arms shipments.

Yesterday's action was an exchange of diplomatic notes between Undersecretary of State James E. Webb and Gholam Abbas Aram, Iranian charge d'affairs. Both stressed that the purpose of the American aid is to increase Iran's ability to defend itself and not to endanger peace.

C. & O. Dropping 'No-Tip' Policy As Unsuccessful

Cleveland, Ohio, May 24 (U.P.).—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, which three years ago instituted a "no tipping" rule on its dining cars, today announced it was doing away with the regulation.

"Everybody complains about the tipping evil," the railway said, "but the traveling public has proved it is not yet ready to do its part in ending it."

Thomas J. Deegan, vice president in charge of passenger traffic, said that when the no-tip rule went into effect, waiters' wages were raised "to make up for the planned loss of gratuities." But he said "service employes too often are unable to suppress old habits of cadging tips even while pocketing the added compensation intended to replace tips."

Quake Damage in Peru . . .

TOWER TOPPLED—La Merced Church in Cuzco, Peru, was severely damaged in the violent earthquake which rocked the ancient Inca capital Sunday. The tower fell when the tremor started as residents of the 900-year-old city sat down to lunch. Hardly a building remains unscarred and officials say 56 are known dead

15,000 Homeless in Quake

Cuzco, Peru, May 23 (U.P.).—Fifteen thousand of Cuzco's 50,000 inhabitants are homeless and face the threat of epidemics due to Sunday's disastrous earthquake, officials said today.

The known casualties stood at 56 dead and 137 injured. Eighty percent of the city's 4800 homes are in ruins or damaged considerably, authorities said.

They estimated the death toll may reach 80.

President Manuel Odria, two cabinet ministers and a number of government officials arrived to direct relief and construction work.

City Prefect Jose Torre said the chief concern now is providing shelter for the homeless and that tents have been asked from the American Red Cross.

Last night parks and squares were jammed with hundreds sleeping on the grounds, without blankets or adequate clothing. The temperature reached 32 degrees.

Falling walls and roofs have killed at least five persons in the past 24 hours, officials said.

Authorities have ordered supplies of serum to combat a possible outbreak of pneumonia, typhus and smallpox.

AF Revamps Forces in U. S.; Ninth Dropped

The Air Force yesterday announced a major reorganization of its fighter, light bomber and troop carrier forces in continental United States to bolster the Nation's air defense and give greater support to Army ground troops.

Under the revamping of Continental Air Command the six regional air forces will be cut to four and be charged solely with training the Air National Guard and Air Reserve.

Combat groups will be put under the direct command of the Tactical Air Command and the Eastern and Western Air Defense Forces. The overall Air Defense Command headquarters is abolished.

As disclosed two weeks ago in The Washington Post, a major aim of the move is to put greater emphasis on support of ground troops and provide more joint training which Army chiefs have been demanding.

The Ninth Air Force, with headquarters at Langley AF Base, Virginia, is abolished and the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and Delaware will come under the First Air Force, Mitchel AF Base, New York.

That Air Force, commanded by Maj. Gen. Glenn O. Bargus, will hereafter handle the Guard and Reserve training in this area instead of the Ninth.

The present Tactical Air Force (Provisional) at Pope AF Base, North Carolina, becomes the Ninth Tactical Air Force. All of the changes will go into effect within the next few months.

Under the new set-up, interceptor and all-weather fighter groups east of the Rocky Mountains will be under the Eastern Air Defense Force with headquarters at Mitchel Air Force Base, Hempstead, N. Y.

Groups west of the Rockies will be under the Western Air Defense Force with headquarters at Hamilton Air Force Base, San Rafael, Cal.

Lieut. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead remains continental air commander with supervision of the defense and tactical forces.

Twelfth Air Force headquarters at Brooks Field, San Antonio, Texas, will be closed.

States formerly in the Twelfth Air Force District will be attached to the Fourteenth District which has its headquarters at Robins Field near Macon, Ga.

New Payments Union Is Set For July Start

Paris, May 23 (AP).—A new European Payments Union, made possible by a British decision to pitch in fully with other European countries in breaking down currency barriers, will go into effect July 1.

This was disclosed today at a meeting of experts of the Organization for European Economic Recovery (OEEC), Marshall Plan agency, who have been working on the scheme for months.

The plan has as its aim the freest flow of trade since the war and gives European economic cooperation its biggest boost since the start of the Marshall Plan.

Details of the scheme are not fully worked out. A somewhat detailed but still incomplete outline will be submitted to ministers representing the Marshall Plan countries at a meeting June 2. There will be another meeting of the OEEC ministers June 20 to examine progress of the scheme.

OEEC officials said the whole framework need not be ready for the payments union to go into operation July 1. The decisions have been made, they said, and the rest is technical.

The full impact of Britain's decision to abandon bilateralism in her European trade was felt for the first time at today's meeting.

In nontechnical terms this is what happened:

Prior to the agreement, postwar trade between European nations, and most others—has been on a basis of separate agreements between two nations. This was called bilateral trade. Britain, for instance, would sell machinery to Italy. Italy would pay lira to Britain. In the old days of multilateral trade, Britain could have bought goods in France or the United States with the lira. France or the United States would, in turn, use the lira to buy goods in Italy.

But since the war, it has not been that way. For example, the lira that England received for machinery could be spent only in Italy. Italy wanted to get customers for her industry. The way it worked out, however, was that for months on end there might not be many things for sale in Italy that Britain wanted. So trade slowed down.

What happens now, after July 1? Much of this will be changed, in western Europe especially. Each country will pool its trade credits and deficits in a central clearing house to be called the European Payments Union.

If Italy sells rayon to Holland and gets guilders in return she will report that to the payments union. Itay may not want to buy anything from Holland at the moment, but would like to pay a debt to Switzerland. Until the new plan goes into effect she probably couldn't. But under the new system Switzerland will be glad to accept the guilders through the payments union because they may be used in turn by way of the clearing house to pay off some Swiss debts to other countries.

The key part of the plan is that sterling is recognized as an international currency. About half of the world trades in sterling. Most other European currencies are not accepted in world trade with any such degree of freedom.

In coming into the European Payments Union, Britain insisted that this fact be recognized. Special conditions are being worked out to prevent sterling's position being harmed.

Red Youths Seized In West Berlin

Berlin, May 23 (U.P.)—Eleven Communists, nine of them in uniform, were arrested tonight for driving into the western section of Berlin in defiance of an Allied ban against delegates to a gigantic Communist Youth rally to be held in the Soviet sector this weekend.

The arrests were the opening incident in what seems certain to be a seven-day period of electric tension that may explode into an East-West crisis.

German police of both western and eastern Berlin were put on a constant "alert" today as first delegates to the Communist rally arrived from the Russian occupation zone.

United States, British and French troops already were on the alert, prepared to back up West German police with force of arms if necessary in the event of a Communist attempt to seize control of the city.

A truck containing 11 members of the Communist Youth organization drove into West Berlin tonight. It was emblazoned with Communist slogans and the blue flags of the Youth organization. In the truck were 11 Communist Youth members, 9 of them in the uniform of the "Free German Youth" of the Soviet occupation zone.

In the first enforcement of the Allied ban against entrance of such groups, German police stopped the truck, arrested the 11 Communists and took them to police headquarters for questioning.

Mayor Ernest Reuter reminded Germans of West Berlin tonight that the Communists when they first announced their rally said they would march into his section of the city.

"Today, everybody in Berlin knows that the childish attempt at conquering Berlin—the march on Berlin that was planned for Whitsunday — has already failed," Reuter said in a broadcast to West Germans. "We are committed to stay within the wall of our city, and in staying we will remain a free people."

Gerhart Eisler, who jumped his bail in the United States to avoid prosecution for perjury and is now propaganda chief of the East German puppet government, called a press conference today to say the Whitsunday rally would be peaceful.

"It is time American generals got rid of their fear," Eisler said. "I called this conference to get rid of all the fear that might still be in your bones and give you a chance to bury the campaign of hysteria launched by the Western press."

Acheson to Report to Public On His London Talks May 31

Secretary of State Acheson will deliver a public report May 31 on the London cold-war strategy talks, then pull down the blinds for a secret question-and-answer session with Congressmen.

Only the 433 present members of the House and the 96 Senators are eligible for the second or buttoned-up phase of the discussions—a total hardly more than half again as large as the population of Hinsdale County, Colo. (1940 census).

The lawmakers, cynically accustomed to Washington's porous walls, anticipated extensive leakage from the confidential conference.

"You fellows will have it within an hour," Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee predicted to reporters.

Senator Smith Agrees

Senator Smith (R., N. J.), a member of the same committee, said any off-the-record remarks by the Secretary of State probably wouldn't stay that way long.

Acheson is known to be eager not only to bolster a bipartisan foreign policy, but to improve his personal relations with Congress. His proposed hush-hush huddle with the lawmakers is considered a move in that direction.

The Secretary is returning by ship from England, where he conferred with his British and French counterparts and later with the Foreign Ministers of all the nations joined for common defense under the Atlantic Pact. He is to report to President Truman on Monday, then appear before Congress two days later, in the Congressional Library.

May Go on Radio

The first part of his report will be public and probably will be broadcast, Lincoln White, State Department press officer, said. Then the official curtain goes down and Acheson, locked up with the Congressmen, will endeavor to answer their specific questions.

Senator Saltonstall (R., Mass.) may have given a hint of the trend of some of the questioning, in a remark in the Senate yesterday. The New Englander asked Democratic Leader Lucas whether there would be a discussion of certain agreements regarding economic help to Europe after 1952, which Saltonstall said he understood were reached in the London talks.

Lucas replied he is sure that Acheson will answer "in a forthright way" any questions put to him.

"Confidential" talks to Congress are no novelty. Several were held at the Library of Congress during and after the war. In each case the gist of the discussions was public knowledge in a matter of hours.

Red Army Is Being Formed In East Germany, Allies Say

brand of appeasement," aimed at ending the recent Soviet boycott of U. N. bodies by seating the delegates of Communist China. Knowland said yielding to Russia on this issue would be "as destructive to the U. N. and to the ultimate peace of the world as was the Pact of Munich" in 1938.

The three-power notes yesterday suggested that the western governments would look with jaundiced eyes on any Soviet "peace" proposals, from Lie or any other source. The American note said:

"Representatives of the Soviet government have, on numerous occasions, spoken of the Soviet government's desire for peace. Such verbal protestations, however, can hardly be expected to receive credence among the free peoples of the world when the Soviet government is simultaneously creating a military force of considerable size and strength in violation of its solemn international commitments.

Doubt of Pacific Intentions

"By this and other actions the Soviet government has destroyed world confidence in the sincerity of its promises, and has created throughout the world widespread doubts as to its pacific intentions.

"If the Soviet government wishes to restore in some measure international confidence in its alleged attachment to peace, it cannot fail to dissolve immediately the militarized units which it has set up in eastern Germany."

The Soviet government will, of course do no such thing. It is far likelier to retort that the Western Allies themselves are preparing the rearmament of western Germany, and it can use as evidence the statements of many Western military and civilian leaders.

The difference is that the civilian governments of the United States and Britain have, until now, overruled every attempt of their military advisers to start rearming western Germany—the latest instance being the recent foreign ministers' discussions on Germany in London. The Russians, on the contrary, have actually set up such a force, according to the three notes and to additional evidence published by the State Department.

Not Ordinary Police Force

The American note described the east German force as "a police force which has, by reason of its military training and equipment, the character of an army." Its name, the note said, was the Main Administration for Training (Hauptverwaltung Fuer Ausbildung in German.)

"It is not an ordinary police force and it does not have ordinary police duties," the note said.

Citing five major wartime and postwar agreements to disarm Germany and keep her disarmed, the note said the Western Allies had effectively kept their part of the bargain, while Russia had "directly violated" hers.

"The establishment of a military force, or militarized police, in eastern Germany," the American note said, "could not have been accomplished without the deliberate approval of the Soviet government, and it is an action squarely in opposition to the efforts being made by the United States and other nations to create a stable and lasting peace."

The British and French notes made similar points, though not in identical language.

The State Department disclosed, in a memorandum published with the note, that the east German army was founded in August last year. Its commander was Inspector General Wilhelm Zaisser, who served under the name of Gomez in the Spanish Civil War.

The present military capabilities of the force are "negligible," the State Department said, but in the future it could become the nucleus of a new German army or an "internal security force to maintain Communist control."

The memorandum went on to say:

There is a direct chain of command from Zaisser to Gen. Major Petrakovsky of the Soviet Control Commission.

A Soviet officer is assigned to each of the "alert units" and officers' schools.

Morale in the force is "generally low because of bad housing, restrictions on personal freedom, and lack of enthusiasm; many of the enlisted men were "coerced" into serving.

The key men of the force, according to the State Department, are those who served with Zaisser in Spain, or "old-line German Communists," or former German army officers who "graduated" from prisoner-of-war camps in Russia.

copied in time "for every other group in this country."

Two Republicans, Senators Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.) and H. Alexander Smith (N. J.) sprang to Connally's defense, and especially to the investment portions of the Point Four legislation. But as opposition speeches continued Connally decided to put off a vote until today.

In the original Senate debate, the Point Four section was authorized by only a one-vote margin. Even if it passes today, there will be every prospect of sharp cuts in Point Four and Marshall Plan appropriations.

Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee already has called Point 4 program "madness," and other committee members have said they were sharpening their knives for it. The McKellar committee begins hearings on the bill Thursday.

The Gallup Poll

Vote Favors Principle Backed By Acheson at London Parley

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 23.—Even before Secretary of State Dean Acheson made his far-reaching proposals in London aimed at achieving a more effective bond among Atlantic Pact nations, the trend of American public opinion was strongly in favor of closer American ties with these countries.

A public opinion survey completed while the London Conference was in session found an overwhelming vote of 3 to 1 for making the Atlantic Pact a more effective union.

This overwhelming sentiment is bipartisan in character, with very substantial majorities of the rank-and-file of both Democratic and Republican Parties in favor.

In London the Atlantic Pact countries have agreed unanimously to create a planning board of strategy to correlate economic, political and defense planning of member nations.

To determine how voters feel about United States foreign policy today, the Institute recently conducted a series of surveys covering the most vital aspects of foreign policy.

The first question was a test of sentiment on the Atlantic Pact itself, after approximately nine months of operation. The question:

"The United States, England, Canada, France and a few other western European nations have signed an agreement to come to each other's defense if any of them is attacked. Do you think this is a good idea or a poor idea?"

The vote:

Good idea	74%
Fair	6
Poor	11
No opinion	9
	100%

The second question in the survey was designed to find out how voters might feel about broadening the scope of the present working arrangement among Atlantic Pact nations. At the time of the survey, the announcement at the London conference of the new unified economic and defense planning board had not, of course, been made.

The question was:

"It has been suggested that these same countries try to work out a closer relationship, or union, going beyond this one agreement to provide for their common defense. Do you think this is a good idea or a poor idea?"

The results:

Good idea	64%
Fair	8
Poor	14
No opinion	14
	100%

The bipartisan nature of sentiment on this subject is shown in the following table:

	Rep.	Dem.	Ind.
Good idea	65%	68%	59%
Fair	9	6	11
Poor	15	12	16
No opinion	11	14	14
	100%	100%	100%

With several different proposals for a union of Atlantic nations pending in Congress, the Institute put the issue to voters in its survey through the following question:

"Do you think it would be a good idea or a poor idea for the United States to join with these other countries in a federal union —that is, something like the way the 48 States in this country are joined together?"

Here is the result:

Good idea	36%
Fair	8
Poor	41
No opinion	15
	100%

Whether the United States joins such a union or not, most voters think it would be a good idea if European countries joined together to form their own "United States of Europe."

"Regardless of whether the United States joins such a federal union or not, do you think it would be a good idea or a poor idea for the countries of western Europe to join together in a United States of Europe?"

Good idea	65%
Fair	5
Poor	15
No opinion	15

U. N. Sources List Lie's Points

Lake Success, N. Y., May 23 (U.P.) The "Ten Points for Peace" laid before the Big Four powers by United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie call for top-level Security Council meetings. Prompt disarmament talks and establishment of a U. N. army to prevent war, diplomatic sources disclosed tonight.

Lie's 10 points were described as a collection of ideas to be discussed over a long period rather than a program of immediate action.

Reliable sources said the 10 points were:

1. The holding of periodic Security Council meetings to be attended by chiefs of state or their Foreign Ministers.
2. Resumption of East-West talks within the UN on prohibition of atomic and hydrogen weapons and control of atomic energy.
3. Resumption of U.N. talks on reduction of conventional armaments.
4. Pressing of new efforts to reach agreement on the recruiting of security forces—in effect, a U.N. army—to be placed at the disposal of the Security Council as a watchdog of peace.
5. Advocacy of universal membership in the U.N.
6. Establishment of an active program of technical assistance to the world's backward areas.
7. More vigorous use of the U. N.'s specialized agencies. Such as the World Health Organization and its 20 similar organs.
8. Development of the U. N.'s work in the field of human rights and fundamental freedoms.
9. Use of the U. N. to promote the advancement of dependent and colonial peoples.
10. Use of the U. N. Charter to "speed up the development of international law."

Navy Modernization Is Voted

vided for family housing in the United States.

Chairman Vinson told a reporter for The Washington Post that if any place needs family housing it is Quantico. He said The Washington Post did a great thing in pointing out the need, but that the family housing at Quantico went out of the bill with all similar projects in the continental United States.

He said the committee hopes the Wherry act will provide the housing needed at Quantico, and if that doesn't work out, "we'll take up the problem at Quantico in the next session."

The bill carries about 100 million dollars to strengthen defenses in Alaska, which General Eisenhower recently warned was a "weak link."

Four submarines of radically new type are provided in the latter program. Besides the 40 million dollar atom-powder sub—which officials estimate will not be ready for five years — there are:

A 2200-ton experimental submersible wth a "closed cycle" power plant, which can operate indefinitely below the surface — without even a snorkel. It would cost 37 million dollars.

A tiny, 250-ton submarine costing about three million dollars, also experimental.

An experimental "target" sub. of about 1100 tons to cost about 10 million dollars.

Other new ships authorized in the measure include: 79 small amphibious craft costing $10,400,000; eight mine-sweepers costing $27,500,000; 20 lighters for harbor freighters, two million dollars.

Total new construction would total 50,000 tons and the amount of existing ships which could be converted to new types is limited to 200,000 tons. The latter include rebuilding four destroyer escorts to combat modern subs, converting 11 older-type subs to snorkel-craft and reconstructing three present submersibles to hunt and destroy enemy subs.

Included in the military construction bill as it passed the House were authorization for the following Washington area projects:

Arlington Hall, Va.—$94,000 for extension of wing.

Army Medical Center, D. C.—$350,000 for rebuilding heating plant.

Army Transmitting Station, D. C. area—$1,186,500 for land, roads, barracks, power facilities, etc.

Fort Belvoir, Va.—$118,000 for communications building.

Camp Detrick, Md.—$5,822,500 for additional buildings, shops, laboratories, etc.

Naval Research Laboratory, D. C.—$1,570,000 for new research building.

Naval Engineering Experimental Station, Annapolis—$2,000,000 for submarine propulsion test facility.

Carderock, Md., Model Basin—$2,344,000 for altering and completing wind tunnels and water tunnel.

Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Md.—$410,000 for interior ballistics building.

Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent, Md—$1,100,000 for a new catapult and arresting gear.

Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.—$1,540,000 for model test tank, ballistics laboratory.

Czechs Tell U. S. To Cut Staff More

Prague, May 24 (AP).—The Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry tonight demanded that the United States reduce its American diplomatic staff in this country to 12 and its Czech employes to 7.

The demand followed a two-thirds reduction of the American diplomatic staff in response to the April 28 request of the Czechoslovak government.

The Foreign Ministry note said the "unjustified reprisal" of the American Government last week in ordering a corresponding two-thirds reduction in Czech diplomatic personnel in the United States was a "crude violation of usual inter-state relations." Czech consulates at Pittsburgh and Cleveland also were closed down by the United States order.

(Government officials in Washington indicated the United States probably will reply with a second round of retaliation. State Department records listed about 16 Czech officials and an equal number of clerical employes still in the United States.

(Originally the American diplomatic staff in Czechoslovakia numbered 67, the State Department said, but now numbers only 15 due to various withdrawals demanded by the Prague regime.)

The Foreign Ministry note asked that the total of American diplomatic personnel in the embassy here and in the consulate at Bratislava be limited to 12, and that the reduction be carried out within two weeks.

Oil Imports Held Costing 23,000 Jobs

Loss of 23,000 jobs in the American oil and gas industries over the past year is directly traceable to the growing importation of cheap foreign oil, a Senate Labor Subcommittee was informed yesterday.

The subcommittee, investigating the Nation's unemployment situation, heard testimony from coal industry spokesmen on Monday that 50,000 miners and transport workers lost jobs because of the oil imports.

Yesterday, the independent oil producers warned the Senators that the oil imports imperiled the domestic oil industry—and thereby the national economy and security.

H. B. Fell, of the Independent Petroleum Association said "two world wars have proved we cannot rely on foreign oil for the protection of our own borders."

Fell charged the influx of cheap oil was eliminating independent oil producers to the advantage of a "monopolistic combine," which he said was behind the import of the fuel. He named seven companies as controlling the world petroleum industry outside of this country, excluding Russia and Mexico: Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony-Vacuum, Standard Oil of California, Gulf, Texas Co., Dutch-Shell and Anglo-Iranian Oil.

To remedy the situation, Fell urged establishment of a quota on imports, higher import duties on oil, or provision of a balance between exports and imports of oil.

Candy-Like Poison Stolen By Kids; England Frantic

Tipton, England, May 23 (U.P.)—Police in two counties searched frantically today for candy-shaped balls of potassium cyanide—enough to kill 10,000 persons.

The balls apparently were stolen by children from a local factory.

Loud-speaker trucks and special announcements on motion picture screens warned residents of Staffordshire and Worcestershire about the poison. Emergency supplies of antidote were distributed to police stations, and hospitals were alerted.

"If a child merely licked one of the balls he probably would die immediately," a chemist said.

ECA Director on Formosa Asked for View on Future Aid

Taipei, Formosa, May 23 (AP).—Washington asked the United States aid chief on Formosa today for his views on future economic grants for Nationalist China.

Dr. Raymond Moyer, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration here, said the request was "presumably in expectation of favorable action" on a bill before Congress to extend aid for another year. The current ECA program ends June 30.

"This appears to indicate," he said, "that ECA in Washington is not closing down the program in Formosa."

Other Americans appeared bent on remaining here despite the threat of a Communist invasion within the next three months.

A survey by the Associated Press showed no one is preparing to leave simply because of the invasion menace. Most of the Americans are missionaries or businessmen.

The cival war was in a lull. Presumably the Communists are busy 100 miles away on the mainland preparing for the invasion across Formosa strait.

(Chinese press reports in Hongkong said the Nationalists had repulsed a Communist attempt to seize the Wanshan Islands. Nationalists use the islands west of Hongkong in blockading China's south coast. The Nationalists claimed they killed 100 invaders and sank 70 junks.)

Reds Accuse Britain Of Aiding Nationalists

San Francisco, May 23 (AP).—The The Chinese Communists today accused Britain of aiding China's Nationalists while seeking to establish diplomatic relations with the Red regime.

A Peiping broadcast quoted a spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs as saying "it is completely necessary to ask the British government to clarify further again its position with regard to . . . these inconsistencies between declaration and action."

J. C. Hutchison, British charge d'affaires, has been in Peiping since February negotiating with Communist officials.

The House yesterday approved bill for civil government and home rule for the Navy controlled island of Guam.

A similar measure is pending before the Senate Interior Committee.

Youth Shoots Self On New Grave of His Sweetheart

Nashville, Tenn., May 23 (AP).—A grief-stricken youth shot himself today beside the flower-banked grave of a girl friend who killed herself Saturday.

"I want to be with her—bury me next to her," he sobbed as he lay across the grave.

John Fields, investigator for the District Attorney General's office, said Charles Edward Burt, 23, of Charlotte, Tenn., shot himself in the abdomen—then collapsed on the grave in Springhill Cemetery.

Burt was taken to a hospital critically wounded.

Fields said the youth shot himself at the grave of Miss Ruth Mason Kelth, 27, an office worker who took her own life with a pistol.

Lightning Kills Carpenter on Job

Baltimore, May 23 (AP).—A man was killed by lightning today as a violent thunderstorm ripped across North Baltimore and its suburbs, flooding streets and sewers.

Leo Ours, 24, was killed. He and three other carpenters were working on a house under construction in the 3600 block Chesterfield ave. when a bolt struck the building. The other three were stunned.

Ours came here from Petersburg, W. Va., yesterday to take the job.

Net Loss in Revenue Seen from Tax Bill

NYHT News Service

Members of the House Ways and Means Committee acknowledged yesterday that the pending tax bill may reach the House with a cut in excise taxes calling for a net loss of revenue to the Government.

On the basis of the committee's action to date, tentative approval has been given to reductions in excise taxes amounting to $1,040,000,000. At the same time the committee has been unable to agree on various provisions designed to close tax law loopholes, which were estimated to provide more than $350,000,000 in new revenue.

As the committee has voted to sidetrack President Truman's recommendations that the Federal estate and gift taxes be revamped to provide 400 million dollars in additional taxes, the new revenue field has been narrowed down to increased corporation taxes.

Representative Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.), chairman of the committee, indicated that the showdown may come next week. A committee print of the tax bill, embodying the excise tax cuts and proposed loophole plugging provisions thus far approved by the committee, will be ready by the end of this week.

Having rejected the Truman Administration's recommendations to reduce the special depletion allowances now accorded oil, gas, sulphur and nonmetallic minerals, in computing tax liability, the committee may turn to the corporate income tax for additional revenue.

The only positive action taken by the committee yesterday was to approve a 15 percent depletion allowance for borax, now not covered by this special tax treatment.

Blough Gives Ideas Before Senate Unit

. . . Opposed to 'deficit spending'

Roy Blough, picked by President Truman to be one of his three top economic advisers, said yesterday he would quit the job if the Administration ever turned to any policy that he believed seriously threatened the country's welfare.

Blough was before the Senate Banking Committee which is considering his nomination to the council of economic advisers to the President.

Lacking a quorum, the committee delayed action on Blough's appointment to the $16,000 a year post. Favorable committee action is expected next week, sending the nomination on to the Senate for confirmation.

There has been a vacancy on the economic group for several months since Edwin G. Nourse resigned as chairman after a disagreement over administration policies. Leon H. Keyserling has been promoted to chairman.

Blough, 48, is now a University of Chicago professor.

Senators Ives (R., N. Y.), Flanders (R., Vt.) and Taylor (D., Idaho) questioned him at length about his economic theories.

He told them he was opposed to "deficit spending" as a continued policy, was "perturbed" about increasing the present national debt of more than 250 billion dollars and was opposed to presenting "political" policies or decisions as "economic."

Unlike former Chairman Nourse, Blough said he believed that the presidential economic advisers should feel free to testify before congressional committees and make public appearances. But Blough said their first duty was to the President and the Administration.

Blough had a long exchange with Senator Ives about "deficit spending" and whether the Nation now is in a "state of creeping inflation."

Ives said housing recently had been advancing in cost sharply and pointed to the Government's spending more than its income.

Blough said there was "political discipline" in Government's paying its way. If most citizens ever get to believing that the Government can spend without limits, Blough said that could be fatal.

He told Senator Flanders that many decisions by Congress and others in Government were made under "considerations of a non-economic character" best termed political.

"Do you have any objections to clothing those (political decisions) in the garments of economics?" Flanders asked.

House Vote Upholds Blackney's Election

The House voted yesterday, without debate, to sustain the right of Representative Blackney (R., Mich.) to his House seat in the contest brought by George D. Stevens, Flint Democrat.

In two minutes the House brought to an end the contest started more than a year ago by Stevens after Blackney defeated him by about 750 votes in the 1948 election.

Minority Takes Swing at Oil Tidelands Bill

A blistering minority report has been filed by eight members of the House Judiciary Committee against a bill to give the States ownership of oil-rich submerged coastal lands.

Chairman Celler (D., N. Y.) heads the list of those condemning the bill. It now awaits decision by the House Rules Committee on when it is to go to the House itself for debate.

Terming the measure a "calling card for war," the minority report added:

"Every mile of our littoral (coastal) 3-mile zone and continental shelf would be sown with seeds of international 'incidents.'

"It took ages of negotiation after the first 3-mile cannon shot to gain the acceptance of the 3-mile control zone as a part of international law by all civilized nations. It is the law of the world. It can be changed only following the same tedious way by which it was originally adopted, or by war."

Would Give Clear Title

The bill would give the States clear title to the lands seaward from shore for a distance of three miles. The States also would have police powers over waters out to the edge of the continental shelf. The shelf extends out roughly 90 to 125 miles in the Gulf of Mexico where some oil wells now are producing.

The bill contains a provision that Federal leasing on lands from the 3-mile limit seaward should be effective as of January 1, 1949. The Supreme Court ruled in a California tidelands case that leases on all offshore properties were under Federal control as of June 23, 1947.

Referring to this section, the minority report added:

"Subsequent to the latter date, certain States despite their knowledge of that case continued to issue leases and to accept bonus payments and rentals under the offshore lease.

Calling such action high-handed is an understatement.

States "Thumbed Noses"

"In effect with these leases the States in question just thumbed their noses at the Supreme Court and the United States. Common decency would require the offending States to turn over to the United States Treasury all royalties and rentals from such leases of Federal lands. But apparently the States in question can pocket that money."

The States were not mentioned by name, but Texas and Louisana have issued leases for offshore drilling. Both States are defendants in a suit filed by the Government and now pending in the Supreme Court. The Government in the litigation seeks control of the submerged lands off those States.

The minority report concludes:

"The right of all the people of the United States, acting through their National Government, to use this oil is like the personal right to breathe the air—necessary to the maintenance of constitutional vigor."

Besides Celler, others signing the report were Representatives Hobbs (D., Ala.) Byrne (D., N.Y.), Lane (D., Mass.), Feighan (D., Ohio), Ramsay (D., W. V.), Denton (D., Ind.) and Rodino (D., N. J.).

16 Reorganization Plans Become Law

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Sixteen of 21 Government reorganization plans submitted last March by President Truman became law last midnight, as a Senate drive to kill three of them failed.

The streamlining proposals, stemming from the Hoover Commission report, mainly set up more direct lines of authority in Government by centralizing responsibility in key agency heads.

For President Truman, it was a 76-percent batting average. Only 5 of his 21 plans were defeated, all of them in earlier votes by the Senate.

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report called it the best reorganization record of any Congress in the Nation's history.

"But it's still not good enough," said Dr. Robert L. Johnson, chairman of the citizens group.

Johnson urged President Truman to resubmit as many of the defeated plans as possible, and to send up new ones "to keep the reorganization drive from bogging down."

He estimated approximately 35 percent of the Hoover Commission recommendations have now been put in effect.

In transmitting the 21 plans to Congress more than two months ago, Mr. Truman said they would "take us well along the road toward more effective, economical and responsible Government."

He said these and other plans previously submitted covered nearly half the ground in the Hoover report. On May 9 he submitted four more. The additional plans will become law in 60 days unless Congress says "No."

Commerce Plan Clears

The three plans cleared by the Senate yesterday just ahead of the deadline (1) reorganized the Commerce Department to centralize control of all bureaus in the Secretary; (2) shifted the job of advance planning of nonpublic works to the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and (3) centered control of Government office space and building management in the General Services Administration.

Limiting debate on each challenged plan to one hour, the Senate:

Rejected 43 to 29 a resolution by Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) to block the Commerce Department reshuffling. Wiley charged it would "destroy" the independent status of the Patent Office.

Defeated by an identical vote of 43 to 29 a resolution by Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) to kill the nonpublic works planning transfer. Aiken said it would turn 380 temporary Federal jobs into permanent jobs.

Johnston Defeated

Defeated by an overwhelming 69-to-7 vote a third resolution by Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) to centralize custodial functions in the GSA.

A Constitutional majority (49 Senate votes and 218 House votes) is required to block a Presidential merger and only five times this session has the Senate been able to muster that many. All plans not rejected by one of the two Houses automatically become law. Only two of the 21 plans were even challenged in the House, and both of these were cleared. Ten of the plans were not questioned in either House.

Of the five plans defeated earlier in the Senate, only one, abolishing the independent status of the NLRB's general counsel, was not sponsored by the Hoover Commission. The four others, all carrying the indorsement of the Citizens Committee on the Hoover Report, would have centered authority in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Communications Commission, the Agriculture Department and the Treasury Department.

Truman Lampooned Senate

The President last week lampooned the Senate for rejecting these and Administration forces turned on the heat to clear the rest. Yesterday Senator Wiley was "called to order" by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) for charging that the President "ordered" Senate Democrats to support the remaining plans. Vice President Barkley, in the chair, declined to rule on Kilgore's point that Wiley was impugning the motives of other Senators. The Senate voted to let Wiley proceed.

Here is a brief recap of the reshuffling that became effective last midnight.

Plans 2, 3, 5 and 6. These transfer to the heads of four departments, Justice, Interior, Commerce and Labor, functions and powers now conferred by law on subordinate officials.

Plans 8, 9, 10 and 13. These fix in the chairmen responsibility for the day-to-day administration of four regulatory agencies — Federal Trade and Power Commissions, Securities and Exchange Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board. (Plan 9, covering FPC, was challenged in the Senate Monday but opponents fell 12 votes shy of the number needed to stop it.)

Plans 14 and 19. These strengthen the Labor Department by giving it two new functions. The Bureau of Employes Compensation would come under it along with the responsibility for coordinating the enforcement of wages and hours legislation affecting federally financed contracts.

GSA Rounded Out

Plans 15, 18 and 20. These shift limited functions to and from the General Services Administration to round out the housekeeping pattern of that agency.

Plan 21. This transfers the functions of the Maritime Commission to the Commerce Department where they are reconstituted in a Federal Martime Board and a Maritime administrator. (Senate opponents tried to block this Monday, but failed by a vote of 34 to 36.)

In urging the President to resubmit some of the defeated merger proposals, Chairman Johnson of the organized citizens group said Mr. Truman should bring them into "full conformity" with the Hoover report. He said this would "meet objections of many Senators who claimed to be strongly in favor of reorganization, but against certain proposals."

Johnson said he was "shocked by the powerful opposition brought against the defeated plans by certain pressure groups" and warned: "It is this type of opposition the people of this Nation must fight if they want good Government."

Johnson stressed that presidential reorganization plans can accomplish only part of the Hoover Commission recommendations. He called attention to 26 bills now pending in the Senate and 30 in the House which would carry out specific Hoover Commission proposals.

Of these, he listed the following as most important: (1) modernization of the Postoffice and elimination of political appointment of postmasters; (2) reorganization of the Civil Service personnel system, and (3) complete overhauling of the "antiquated Federal accounting methods" employed by the GAO.

"Saving of 500 million dollars annually in operating costs can result from enactment of the above measures," he said.

A-Power Seen Solving U. S. Water Dearth

Philadelphia, May 23 (AP).—The atom in peacetime could be harnessed to produce water for everyone, everywhere.

At first, says N. R. Beers, editor of Nucleonics Magazine, the process would be neither cheap nor efficient—"but that is of no consequence if uranium is available. Uranium, of course, is a source of atomic power."

Beers told delegates to the seventieth annual convention of the American Water Works Association today that the atom could do much more than just provide water for the world's parched areas.

The New York author envisioned construction of several nuclear reactors (atom makers) "in locations where the water problem is acute and where cool salt water is available in quantity close to shore. Such conditions co-exist in numerous places over the earth, notably on West coasts."

The reactors would provide power "in the evaporation of water from the ocean, in the operation of steam-jet pumps to lift the water (both salt and fresh), and in space heating if desired," Beers declared.

But he said the atomic water-making device could do more than just solve a water shortage.

"It would secure valuable elements from sea water," Beers said, "provide additional production facilities for plutonium, serve for additional reactor research, and pump water up mountains into reservoirs from which ordinary hydroelectric power can be obtained."

FEPC Fight Postponed For 3 Weeks

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) yesterday announced a Senate legislative program that will put off another test on the Administration's FEPC program for at least three weeks, and probably longer.

The decision was disclosed after a White House leadership conference and a Senate Democratic policy conference.

Lucas told the Senate that two conference committee reports, a key farm measure, and "probably" the important Social Security revision legislation will be taken up before returning to President Truman's hotly contested Fair Employment Practices Commission bill.

Asked where that left the Administration's key civil-rights measure, Lucas replied, "Hanging in the balance."

Pledges New Showdown

He insisted he fully intends to bring a new showdown "at the proper time," when he is sure "all the Senators can be there."

Lucas has attributed the decisive defeat of the Administration's first test last Friday to the absence of 12 Senators. The Administration, even with the aid of all but six Republicans, could only muster 52 votes—12 short of the necessary 64 to choke off a Southern filibuster.

But of the 12 absentees, one, Senator Garrett Withers (D., Ky.), has announced he opposes the bill. Therefore the Administration must still make at least one convert from its own ranks before it can secure action.

READ what ARMOUR & COMPANY has to say about the quality of GIANT Top-Notch BEEF

ARMOUR AND COMPANY
GENERAL OFFICES, UNION STOCK YARDS
CHICAGO 9, ILLINOIS

April 20, 1950

Giant Food Department Stores
P. O. Box 1804
Washington 13, D. C.

Dear Sirs:

Your specifications for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef are most rigid, and a lot goes on behind the scenes to produce and select the small percentage of cattle that will meet your exacting specifications.

BREEDING Only certain pure strain breeds of cattle will efficiently convert corn and other feeds into GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef.

FEEDING It takes many months of scientific feeding on a diet principally of corn to produce GIANT TOP-NOTCH quality.

BUYING It takes qualified livestock buyers, with years of experience, to recognize GIANT TOP-NOTCH quality in cattle on the hoof.

PROCESSING Extensive facilities are necessary for converting these cattle into GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef to retain all of the quality and goodness that the producer has painstakingly built into the cattle with many months of careful feeding.

SELECTION To the eye of the expert beef grader, who makes the final selection of GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef, this quality is indicated by "marbling", "covering" and "finish" — referring to the distribution of fat through the red meat and the texture of the meat.

We selected our Omaha and Sioux City plants as the primary source of supply for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef as these plants are located in the heart of the corn country and, throughout the year, their receipts of the best grades of cattle will be more consistent than other markets.

Proof of the rigidity of your specifications for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef is best indicated by the fact that, in the total production of cattle at Omaha, only 15 out of every 100 would be acceptable for GIANT TOP-NOTCH selection; at Sioux City, only 14 out of every 100 would be acceptable. OF THE COMBINED PRODUCTION AT ALL ARMOUR PLANTS, ONLY 12 OUT OF EVERY 100 WOULD BE ACCEPTABLE FOR GIANT TOP-NOTCH.

Our 80 years of experience in the beef business is an insurance policy that underwrites the quality of every cut of GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef produced in Armour plants.

Yours very truly,
P. A. Greene

FBI Knows Every Red, M'Grath Says

must be translated into a "bill of responsibility."

Recalling that a serious crime was committed every 18 seconds in the United States in 1949, he also said that in the same year 31 percent of all persons committed to Federal institutions were between 18 and 24, and 70 percent of all first offenders were in the same age range.

This trend, he declared, must be not only halted but reversed. But no new law Congress could enact, he said, could diminish juvenile delinquency; that could come only from the example set by adults and from proper training.

The problems of citizenship, McGrath stated, could be settled only by solving the problems of education. He added, "if the Eighty-first Congress adjourns the present session without passing a bill to aid in the education of millions of young people it will fail in its duty to the American people."

Dr. Holt Speaks

Dr. Andrew D. Holt, president of the National Education Association, told the gathering more education was the best answer to inspiring American citizens to "feel keenly their obligation to think, to work, to respect and to vote."

Schools are the logical and most effective laboratory for training a thinking youth, he declared. "But it cannot be done with poorly qualified teachers. Yet almost 100,000 of our teachers possess substandard training.

"It cannot be done in overcrowded classes, yet thousands of our classrooms are crowded to overflowing. It cannot be done in antiquated, inadequate school buildings . . . yet 10 billions is needed during the next decade to bring our school buildings in line with our needs."

In an informal talk to the delegates on a visit to the White House during the day, President Truman warned that some Americans think the United States should "surrender to Russia."

He said he recently received a disturbing postcard from Los Angeles which suggested, "In all seriousness, that the proper thing to do was to surrender to Russia."

The President quoted the writer as saying, "We may lose our freedom but it is better to lose our freedom than our lives."

Said Truman: "Now what do you think of that? That is Patrick Henry in reverse."

"There are people like that in this country," said Mr. Truman, "and it is your business to see that they do not increase in number. I hope you will do that."

Praising the benefits of American citizenship during most of his three-minute speech, the President commented on the "tremendous amount of ignorance among leading citizens of this country" on the freedoms American citizenship provides.

"A great many people just take things for granted. They don't appreciate what they have," he said.

The conference, sponsored by the Justice Department and the National Education Association, has been meeting at the Statler in a five-day session devoted to discussing means of improving citizenship education, particularly among youth.

President Truman told his guests that informing the people of the United States of their rights and duties as citizens is the most worthwhile endeavor they can possibly pursue.

The meeting will close today with an address by Vice President Alben W. Barkley.

Senate Approves Pay Measure

funds and continued life for OHE are expected to face a stiffer fight in the Senate.

VA: A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) yesterday was told how the job-cutting riders to the general appropriation bill would cripple operations of the Veteran's Administration.

The hearing was open briefly. But before VA Administrator Carl Gray could get into details of how the Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders would affect his agency, the hearing was ordered closed and reporters were asked to leave.

As a beginner, Gray said, VA would have to fire 6800 employes under the Taber-Thomas rider. Budget Director Frederick Lawton told the full Appropriations Committee last week that both riders would wipe out more than 25,000 VA jobs in the next year.

The riders exempt doctors, dentists, nurses and orderlies in VA hospitals. Gray made the same point made earlier by Lawton—that the riders would force VA to fire hospital service and maintenance employes such as cooks, bakers, custodial, and laundry people.

Gray said it will be impossible to give service to veterans as Congress intended if the riders become law.

Commissioners Cut Penalty Of Policeman

The Commissioners yesterday reduced the penalty of Police Pvt. Raymond E. Bright, convicted of feigning illness, from dismissal to a $200 fine.

Bright, 39, and a member of the department for nine years, was convicted by a police trial board of reporting in sick April 26 to avoid duty. The board recommended he be discharged.

According to testimony before the trial board, Bright failed to appear at No. 2 Precinct for roll call. Called at home, he reportedly said he had fallen aseep and would be at the station in a few minutes.

Government Sues Builder In House Sale

Nicholas F. Giampa, an Arlington builder, has been accused by the Government of overcharging $4500 in the sale of a Falls Church home he built in 1946 under wartime priorities.

In a suit filed in United States District Court at Alexandria, the Government seeks to force him to repay the $4500, plus $892 representing alleged deficiencies in the building.

The Government wants the repayment made to Mr. and Mrs. George H. Taylor, who bought the house from Giampa.

Auto Smashup Kills Woman; Driver Faces Four Charges

A 21-year-old Hyattsville mother was killed early yesterday when the car she was riding in crashed into a pole on Queen's Chapel rd., near 30th ave., in Mount Rainier.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Leland Memorial Hospital was Mrs. Dorothy A. Hawkins, 21, of 6214 43d ave., Hyattsville, mother of a 17-month-old son. She died of hemorrhage and shock resulting from a ruptured blood vessel in the chest.

Another passenger in the auto, Williard Y. Currin, 27, of 1007 Bunker Hill rd. ne., suffered a fractured right leg and was admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital.

Police said the driver of the car, Frank Smith Jones, 28, of 216 E st. nw., escaped injury. He was charged with reckless driving, driving under the influence of liquor, operating on a suspended permit, and a technical count of manslaughter.

He was released under $2200 bond for a hearing in Hyattsville Police Court June 13.

Police said the Jones auto failed to negotiate a turn, struck the pole, and continued to travel about 100 feet before it stopped against a hedge. The right side of the auto was sheared off.

Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Mrs. Hawkins, a secretary at the Hecht Co.'s Washington offices, was separated from her husband. She lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Loudermilk, in Hyattsville.

She also leaves a sister, Miss June Loudermilk; two brothers, James and Walter, and the son, George Mervin Hawkins.

National Gallery Gets Art Loan from Europe

An "extremely valuable and important" exhibition of paintings from one of Europe's leading private collections will be loaned to the National Gallery of Art in connection with Washington's sesquicentennial, it was announced yesterday. Date of the showing has not been set.

The paintings will be sent here by C. S. Gulbenkian, who last year provided the gallery with the Egyptian section of his collection.

"This loan," the National Gallery said, will form the most important group of works ever lent to an American museum by a European collector."

David E. Finley, director of the National Gallery, said no value has been put on the collection. The request for the loan came from the State Department and is being arranged by the American Embassy in London.

Painters represented will include Gainsborough, Corot, Manet, Monet, Degas, Renoir, Rubens, Stefan Lochner, Dirk Bouts, Carpaccio, Van Dyck, Hals, Lancret, Guard Boucher, La Tour, Hubert Robert, Frangonard and Rembrandt.

Council Bids Farewell to Israel Envoy

The Jewish Community Council of Washington last night held a farewell reception at the Jewish Community Center for the Ambassador from Israel and Mrs. Eliahu Elath.

A brief speaking program preceded the serving of refreshments. Maurice Friedman, president of the Washington Zionist Council, presided.

The Israeli ambassador told the group he regretted leaving America, where he has been for five years. He will become ambassador to Great Britain.

Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the Jewish Community Council, delivered a farewell message on behalf of the 82 member organizations. A. S. Kay, president of the Washington Zionist District, presented the Elaths with a gift on behalf of the Jewish community of Washington.

Rites Honor Confederate Dead Today

Representatives of two patriotic organizations will join today in tribute to Confederate troops who left Alexandria 89 years ago for Civil War combat.

Highlighting the city's annual Confederate Memorial Day observance, exercises will be held at 6 p. m. in Christ Church parish hall. Sponsors are the Robert E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, and the Nellie Custis Lee Chapter, Seventeenth Virginia Regiment, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Following the indoor service, a memorial volley will be fired over the Confederate Mound in the adjacent churchyard by a rifle squad from Battery B, 710th AAA Gun Bn., National Guard.

Principal speaker at the memorial service, of which R. Samuel Luckett is chairman, will be Martin E. Greene, former business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce. During the day, members of the Nellie Custis Lee Chapter will place wreaths on Confederate graves and at the Confederate Monument, Prince and Washington sts.

Gov. Lane To Seek 2d Term in Md.

Annapolis, May 23 (AP).—Governor William Preston Lane, jr., announced tonight he will run for a second term.

His announcement followed a meeting with Democratic leaders from throughout the State.

Lane's statement said:

"I will be a candidate for renomination and reelection on my record. I will promptly make a statement which will be my platform. I expect to have the support of everyone who was here today."

"Everyone here today" was 27 Democratic leaders.

The platform statement will be drawn up and released as soon "as is mechanically possible," a spokesman in the Governor's office said.

The announcement came immediately after the 3½-hour meeting, at which the Democrats traded reports from their own bailiwicks on public reaction to the Lane program, including the sales tax, a 200-million-dollar roads program, a bay bridge, improvements at mental hospitals, and a school construction program.

It was reported that much of the discussion revolved around the general election in November, rather than the September primaries.

Everyone in attendance spoke his piece and one of those present said the meeting ended in "supreme harmony."

Suit Over Love Of Wife, 86, Is Dismissed

An Arlington Circuit Court jury yesterday threw out the alienation of affection suit of 84-year-old George S. Hulme, over his 86-year-old wife's affections.

Hulme, a retired civil engineer, asked $10,000 damages from his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Ristau, 4011 N. 20th rd., whom he charged with "enticing" his wife away from him in 1947.

The Hulmes have been married 58 years. Hulme now lives with another daughter, Mrs. Fannie Fellows, at 406 Oak st., Falls Church.

He asked for the damages to compensate him for the loss of his wife's "comfort, companionship, society, affection, conjugal fellowship and consortium."

He testified Monday that Ristau and another daughter, Miss Mabel Hulme, put his wife in an auto and drove her to their home on November 4, 1947. He said the Ristaus have prevented him from seeing his wife since then and won't allow her to come to him.

During final arguments yesterday, Hulme's attorney, Roy G. Allman, argued Mrs. Hulme is "just as much in jail in their apartment as if she were in the custody of the sheriff."

11 Suburbs to Join Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 23 (AP). — Eleven suburban communities voted today for union with historic Annapolis.

Voters approved annexation to the State Capital by a margin of 113 votes.

Complete unofficial returns in the referendum showed this tally:

For annexation: 1056
Against annexation: 943

Voters also elected eight aldermen to represent the four new wards created by annexation, doubling the size of the city council.

Annapolis will spread out in three directions under standby ordinances which go into effect on Thursday. Previously enacted by the council, they extend the city government over the annexed areas.

Communities to be taken over by the 301-year-old city are West Annapolis, Waldour, Cedar Park, Germantown, Homewood, Eastport, Tyler Avenue, Forest Hills, Fairfax, Truxton Heights and Parole.

As a result, Annapolis will expand from its present .737-square-mile area to 5.55 square miles.

Lehman Sees Threat In Strike-Ban Bill

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) yesterday declared that compulsory arbitration of rail labor disputes is a "revolutionary proposal" and a "long step" toward Government ownership of the railroads.

The former Governor of New York and member of a prominent banking family made his statement in a form of a warning to advocates of legislation for amending the Railway Labor Act so as to outlaw strikes and lockouts.

Lehman's comment was made at a Senate Labor Subcommittee hearing on a bill by Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) to settle railroad management - labor controversies by a presidential board whose conclusions would be binding on both management and union.

Daniel P. Loomis, chairman of the Association of Western Railroads, took issue with Senator Lehman's point of view. Government ownership of the railroads is a far greater menace now, Loomis said, because of the numerous strikes and threats of strikes by the rail unions.

Loomis admitted that for years the Nation's rail carriers had been opposed to compulsory arbitration.

The reason for the change, Loomis said, is that the operating brotherhoods have rarely accepted the nonbinding recommendations of the presidential fact-finding boards set up under the Railway Labor Act, but instead have resorted to strikes and threats of strikes. On the other hand, according to Loomis, the railroads have almost never rejected the fact-finders' proposals.

Under close questioning by Senator Lehman, the rail management spokesman said he "very reluctantly" believed in compulsory arbitration "as applied to certain industries."

Loomis did not name the other industries, but did say that no matter how serious coal and steel strikes might be, neither was as urgently in need of quick settlement as the railroads.

Back Dues Collection Barred In Union Shop Pact, NLRB Says

A union-shop contract does not allow labor organizations to force company employes to pay up long delinquent union dues.

That's the effect of a ruling made yesterday by a three-member panel of the National Labor Relations Board.

In an unanimous decision, the panel held that an employe may not be discharged under a union-shop contract clause for failure to pay up union dues which he owed before the union-shop took effect.

A union-shop is a condition of work under which all company employes and newly hired personnel must join the union within a stated period of time, such as 30 days. Under the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Relations Act, the union shop is not legal unless authorized by a vote of the majority of the employes in a board-conducted election, certified by the board, and then negotiated by the union and the company.

In this case, involving Local No. 1, CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, and the New York Shipbuilding Corp. of Camden, N. J., the union-shop contract was not attained until January 6, 1948. The union then insisted that William Morgan Jones pay up his dues in arrears for the year of 1947. Jones was fired in May, 1948, by the company for failure to comply with the union demand.

Hospital Benefits Increased

Medical hospital benefits are increased in the new agreement; so is vacation pay normally taken in lieu of days off. The UAW estimated the medical-hospital increase at 5 cents an hour. Employes with 1 year's service will get 40 hours' vacation pay. It goes on up to 120 hours' pay for those with 15 years.

Life insurance is increased $500 and sickness and accident benefits by $14 a week in all brackets. Insurance coverage will range from $2500 to $5000 and sickness benefits from $28 to $45.50 a week up to 26 weeks. The company agreed to pay one-half hospital and medical insurance.

First GM employes will be retired January 1, 1952, when the company estimates 4000 will be eligible.

Garment Workers Ask Severance Pay

Atlantic City, N. J., May 23 (AP). David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (AFL), today called for severance pay for the 450,000 members of his organization.

Dubinsky demanded payment by the employers of 2 percent of their payrolls into a special fund. The fund would provide a week's severance pay for each year of employment, he said.

"I do not want the severance pay so much for the workers as I want it as an inducement to keep employers in business," Dubinsky told the opening session of the union's golden jubilee convention.

Representatives of 11 editorial, mechanical, mailers and teamster unions formed a joint council to negotiate with publishers of the city's eight daily papers.

Labor Group Nominates Candidates

Roanoke, Va., May 23 (AP).—The Virginia State Federation of Labor mustered its strength today as the fifty-fourth annual convention nominated officers and passed resolutions aimed at increasing the political role of organized labor during the coming year.

Few internal battles loomed for Wednesday's elections. In only three categories did the delegates nominate more than the necessary number of candidates.

Jack S. Smith of Buckroe Beach, president for five years, was unanimously renominated for his post.

For the post of first vice president, incumbent A. E. Wilson of Roanoke and Frank Adams of Richmond, chairman of the resolutions committee, were nominated.

Five nominations were made for the four posts of executive board member-at-large: Luther Barrett, Jarrett; Dave Alston, Norfolk; O. J. Shaw, Petersburg; A. J. Monroe, Richmond, and William Gray, Washington, D. C.

South Amboy Disaster

"It was like one of those Bikini blasts," said an eyewitness. It must have seemed so, momentarily at least, to thousands of South Amboy citizens stunned Friday evening by the explosion that came without warning as they moved innocently about their ordinary domestic pursuits. Who in this nerve-strained time could have escaped a dread that war had indeed come in the awful, cataclysmic way in which man's ingenuity has made it possible for it to come.

That there was panic in South Amboy should occasion no surprise at all. Understandably, men rushed to remove their families from a danger they could neither estimate nor comprehend. One is reminded of the terror that beset the whole northeastern seaboard at the time of the unfortunate Orson Welles broadcast about an invasion from Mars. In South Amboy, the municipal and national authorities, including the Army, speedily assumed control of the situation; and most residents of the stricken community, after their initial shock, turned stanchly to the work of rescue and repair and restoration of order. In the circumstances, their conduct seems to have been altogether creditable.

Nevertheless the experience illuminates the difficulty ahead of even the most thorough civilian defense preparation against the contingency of sudden disaster. It suggests, too, that the American people ought to have a much clearer understanding than they now possess of the real dangers of atomic attack—the forms it might actually take, the measures that must be adopted for protection. Panic can only compound tragedy; its consequences can be far graver than the event which is its cause. Most plainly of all, the South Amboy explosion indicates, we think, that public officials need to exercise the utmost restraint in exciting the kind of anxiety that turned naturally into terror on this occasion. Careless talk about war can do more damage than a fifth column. In a time of international tension, steady nerves are an indispensable attribute of national security.

President On Pork

President Truman is by no means the first to smell pork in the $1,800,000,000 rivers, harbors and public works bill which he has signed. Congress itself was well aware of the bill's porcine flavor, and Senator Douglas fought vigorously, but unsuccessfully, to strip the bill of its most flagrant vote-attracting bait. This country has not yet devised a method by which necessary public improvements can be authorized without opening a sort of grab bag for politicians. One safeguard has been to have all projects carefully investigated by some reliable executive agency, but in the present bill Congress authorized projects to cost 12 million dollars without even waiting for reports from the Army Engineers—a clear violation of its own policy. The President believes that 89 million dollars of the proposed expenditures under the bill cannot be justified.

There is a good deal to be said, of course, for advance planning and authorization of projects before funds to carry them out are actually available. The result is to create a backlog of approved projects that can go forward whenever the time is ripe and appropriations are forthcoming. But this can easily be overdone. The Hoover Commission estimated a year ago that probably four billion dollars would be required to complete such projects then in construction and authorized. Politics keeps authorizations swollen far beyond the ability of the Government to finance improvements, however necessary or desirable they may be.

The President found other grave defects in the bill. It gives the Department of the Army responsibility for developing comprehensive plans for improvement of the Arkansas, White and Red River basins. Since irrigation, soil conservation, wild life resources, municipal water supplies and power are involved as well as navigation and flood control, and since some of the work will be done by the Agriculture and Interior Departments, the President rightly points out that these agencies and the States should take part in the original planning. Mr. Truman intends to correct this defect and others of a similar nature by executive order so far as that is possible, but that course leaves much to be desired.

Considering the President's indictment of the bill, the surprising thing is that he did not veto it. A veto might have shocked some of the people to whom the President has been making promises, but it might also have persuaded Congress to sweat at least some of the pork out of the bill and to correct its administrative shortcomings.

Who's Losing Japan?

Would to goodness there were a truce to thinking about Asia in terms of the cold war and anticommunism! Within Asia-in-chaos there are particular problems to attend to—problems to which even an approach to a solution is blocked by the preoccupation with the general situation. Yesterday we talked about the particular problem of the Philippines, and today we will talk about the particular problem of Japan. Two years ago, according to the time schedule of the Supreme Commander, the occupation should have been in process of liquidation. Now the authorities in Washington don't know where the general stands. To the military he says one thing; to the civilians, another. The result is that one Washington feud after another breaks out on the basis of what at the moment the general believes or does not believe. Surely the lesson for the President is to see that John Foster Dulles, now named as responsible Executive agent for Japanese peace preparations, goes to Japan next month with Secretary Johnson and General Bradley. At least they will come back with the same story.

But it is time for the military and the civilian to stop wrestling over what General MacArthur thinks about Japan. The starting point is that it is beyond any reasonable as well as beyond the MacArthur period for doing something about Japan. What General MacArthur well knew in 1945 has come to pass in Japanese dissatisfaction and a jaded occupation. He himself, aloof in his ivory tower, reported to by occupation officials who tell him what they think he wants to know, may not now be aware of it. But the fact is plainly apparent to the outsider. Japanese restiveness is quite natural, and there is no point in grumbling about it. They want to be friendly, and will remain friendly if the United States continues to hold the position as the Authority in the Pacific. But they will not keep on the American side with any willingness if nothing is done about their status, but, on the contrary, will become a nation of malingerers and saboteurs.

What burns up even the most cooperative Japanese is the way the Administration is expecting them to acquiesce in our frozen policies. They cannot stand still while the Japanese issue is being studied by the military and then restudied by the civilians, because events don't stand still. They cannot be expected passively to participate in the American nonrecognition policy toward China when they are the victims of it. What the Japanese want and need is to be allowed to earn a living, to be put in the way of running their own affairs, instead of becoming a mendicant and satellite nation. With this aim the American as taxpayer would heartily agree. To the Japanese China is China—a market; but SCAP says there can be no Japanese trade with Communist China, at least officially. The ban is made ridiculous when the Japanese see Japanese trade going on with Hongkong, knowing that British agents are transshipping that trade to Communist China.

The Russians, who haven't taken a recess while we have been conducting the inquest on "Who Lost China?" may sooner or later take advantage of our foolishness in Japan as they did of our foolishness in China. Soon we may be asking "Who Lost Japan?" Japan is unlike Germany in that Russia has more to offer Japan than Germany. Already the Japanese press is running reports that Russia may return the Kuriles. The Japanese know better, but if the Russians were to offer access to the lush fisheries in Russia's waters in the Sea of Okhotsk on anything like prewar terms, then look out for trouble. Japan eats ten times as much fish as meat, or exactly the converse ratio in the American dietary.

Some such Russian bid may come unless the United States bestirs itself and sets out a policy—a policy, as Stewart Alsop said the other day, for which the Allies have been waiting in vain for months and months, not knowing that the policy is constantly being lost between the military and civilian stools in America. The sand is fast disappearing in the hourglass while this internal struggle is going on and the public mind is being bemused by inquests and shadows and slogans and generalizations about our foreign affairs. It is time the country got down to cases in Japan.

Tax Loopholes

The Ways and Means Committee has tentatively approved a plan for taxing dividends at the source similar to the withholding tax on wages and salaries. It is estimated that by such means the Treasury would pick up about 150 million dollars of revenue lost through the failure of taxpayers to report dividend receipts. Every corporation would be required to withhold and pay directly to the Treasury 10 percent of the dividends due each of its stockholders. The taxpayer could then apply for a refund, if his income was so low that he was not required to file returns or if the amount withheld exceeded the amount due. All other taxpayers would, of course, receive credit for the deductions made on their behalf. While this proposal would add to the paper work of the dividend-paying companies and mean more work for individual taxpayers, too, it would not increase the taxes of either corporations or individuals.

At present personal income tax forms do not require an itemized list of dividend payments—an omission that is partly responsible for tax evasions. If taxpayers were required to list each dividend payment separately there would be less temptation to ignore or forget minor items. A reform in methods of reporting taxable income, combined with the withholding tax provision, would not only enable the Treasury to do a better job of checking returns but would give low-income taxpayers entitled to refunds a positive inducement to make full and accurate declarations in regard to dividends.

Quite apart from the considerable loss of revenue resulting from the present loose system, it is highly desirable to plug this loophole for tax evasion. For it is unfair to honest taxpayers and wage earners whose income is taxed at the source to allow any group or class of income recipients to escape payment of taxes because of the inadequacy of a collection system that it is feasible to improve by setting up a better system of controls.

Equal Treatment

Because the progress in race relations in the military forces has been reported as it happened, the report of the President's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services may seem anticlimactic. The sum total of achievements during the 22 months the committee has been in existence is substantial. These strides toward abolition of racial barriers are doubly important because not only have they aided the moral position of the armed services, in most instances they also have increased military efficiency.

The committee finds that the Navy has abolished all restrictions as to race in assignment and billeting, although the number of Negroes in the Navy is still small. The Marine Corps is integrated as to training, but Navy policy remains to be implemented with respect to some separate Negro units. The Air Force has been singularly successful with larger numbers of Negroes, even in that most difficult of racial tension points, recreational facilities. Abolition of separate Negro units is proceeding apace. The Army, which has been the most conservative of the services because of an ingrained policy of segregation and the relatively larger number of Negroes involved, has carried out four essential reforms. Racial restrictions on Army schools and job specialties have been ended, Negroes now may be assigned to any troop unit, and the racial quota on enlistments has been abolished.

Particularly significant are the committee's conclusions respecting the Navy and the Air Force: much skilled manpower had been wasted under the segregation policy because qualified Negroes could not be properly utilized; the range of Negro abilities is much wider than had been assumed; integration actually brought a decrease in racial tension, and enlisted men were "far more ready for integration than officers had believed." These conclusions commend themselves to the Army in following through the admirable start it has made. Assuming good faith, there is still room for improvement in all services, especially the Army, and occasional prodding may be necessary. But the committee has laid the groundwork for constructive and practical progress by dispassionately relating its recommendations to the military advantages to be obtained through better use of manpower.

Smuts' Birthday

One of the world's great citizens, Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, will be 80 years old today. One would suppose that his age and his distinguished services to his country would make the occasion one of national celebration throughout South Africa. But the government Nationalist Party in the Transvaal has expressed concern that the paying of tributes to the former Prime Minister might take on political significance. Accordingly, it brought pressure upon the board of governors of the South African Broadcasting Corp. to cancel a 55-minute feature program in Smuts' honor. At Johannesburg, however, the field marshal will receive the freedom of the city and be guest of honor at a banquet in the evening.

The pettiness which leads the government to interfere so crassly with the homage due a national hero can operate only to diminish its already unenviable standing in the community of nations. Field Marshal Smuts is, to be sure, opposition leader in South Africa and therefore, admittedly, a political power. But he is also much more than this. His stature will be recognized and honored, no doubt, in all other portions of the free world. And he will find comfort, perhaps, in the philosophical reflection that a prophet is never without honor save in his own country.

Symington's Words

Headline readers over the weekend may have gathered the impression that Chairman Symington of the National Security Resources Board predicts an early shooting war. The tone of his talk before the Committee for Economic Development clearly indicated that he is planning for war, but it does not follow that he thinks armed conflict is imminent. For example, he also said: "If we are strong we may prevent a war."

Planning for war, of course, is Mr. Symington's job; if the Nation were operating on the assumption that peace was somehow guaranteed, there would be no need for a National Security Resources Board. But there can be no such assurance, and the reason for the existence of the NSRB is to have plans for manpower and industrial mobilization, the allocation of nonmilitary resources and necessary economic controls ready for immediate use in an emergency. The NSRB also is responsible for civilian defense, and training for that defense after the outbreak of war would be useless.

With one statement by Mr. Symington we are in emphatic agreement, and it applies not only to his own agency, but to the Atomic Energy Commission, the Defense Department and Government in general:

> There is no greater danger to democracy than an ill-informed public; and I hope we can cut down as much as possible the tendency to "classify" information which is far more likely to obtain public understanding and support of policies than to endanger the Nation through becoming public knowledge.

Statehood Reasons

"Observer" (May 16) cites four reasons for not granting Statehood to Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. The first is defense. Here he attempts to show that the defense of these Territories would be hampered by a State government. Do the 48 States we now have place great obstacles before the Department of Defense? The idea is ridiculous.

The second reason he gives is expense. He cites the low population. When a State enters the Union, who pays State expenses? A child could answer that one.

The third reason is that Alaska, by reason of representation in Congress, could ask for more help in development of resources. In other words, he can stand for the representatives of 48 States pushing "pork barrel" bills, but 49 is just too much. I fail to follow that kind of logic.

The fourth reason is purely academic. He says the Territories have a right to their present representation in Congress (a nonvoting delegate) but that the framers of the Constitution never contemplated the admission to Statehood of areas beyond the contigious territory now comprising the 48 States. The practice of putting words in the mouths of persons long dead is not new, but it does not always prove a point.

He also makes an issue of an idea that the people of Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico are not easily assimilated. This, in the first place, is bigotry. Next, the peoples in these Territories are as readily assimilable into the Union of the whole as the various classes of foreigners in our 48 States. I have lived in Hawaii and Puerto Rico, and in my opinion, these people have every right to Statehood. The writer says Statehood would not only bring to Congress six Senators an dthree or more Representatives, not merely to represent them, but also to help govern us. Maybe some new ones could do a better job than the ones that are now supposed to be representing the people.

U. N. Constabulary

So eminent an apostle of world peace as Mr. Bernard Baruch has indicated his support of the resolution sponsored by Senator Douglas of Illinois and Senator Thomas of Utah, pertaining to the information of a United Nations constabulary.

It is proposed that the United States take the lead in getting as many countries as possible to sign a new agreement "supplementing" the United Nations Charter. Under it, countries participating would contribute armed forces to an international peace-keeping force which could be ordered into action instantly by the Security Council. Should a veto occur, the armed forces could be thrown into action by a two thirds vote of the General Assembly, including at least three of the five big powers in the Security Council. Mr. Baruch advanced a similar proposal in 1946 while a member of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission. LELIA C. McCLEAVE.

National Conservatory

Our country is producing today more talent and achievement in the realm of science than in the field of art and music. This was apparent in listening to the recent high school music talent broadcasts sponsored by the Hamilton National Bank.

These performers showed the deep cultural need in Washington of a first-class National Conservatory of Music, where the highest standards of musicianship are required, and where an atmosphere of real musical learning is created.

Much good has gone to seed in Washington in recent years because no real student life has ever existed. Musical ability thrives and grows only on daily competition and association with kindred spirits and artists of high caliber. All the symphony orchestras in the world cannot take the place of good fundamental training and direction. It is "putting the cart before the horse" to think otherwise.

Alexandria Collision

The collision of the Chesapeake & Ohio train with the Silver Meteor at Alexandria last week seems inexcusable. Passenger trains used to carry flagmen who were supposed to hit the dirt and go back 2000 feet and plant torpedoes, light fuses, etc., on an unscheduled stop. Have they done away with them or did they have one and he was afraid he would get his feet wet?

Dividend Taxes

What is behind the move of the Administration to withhold 10 percent tax on dividends? Launched at the start of a new bond drive, is it an effort to divert funds from business enterprises to bonds, or just another burden to industry?

A responsible employe in the Bureau of Internal Revenue informed this writer that every corporation paying dividends sends to that bureau a record of such dividends. It is a comparatively easy matter, and certainly that bureau's function to check those records against the tax returns and act accordingly.

A call to the office of the House Ways and Means Committee elicited the information that the committee was aware that corporations sent in such reports, but felt the Government did not have the facilities to make the proper use of them and proposed the withholding tax on dividends.

The ramifications of this move are illimitable! In 30 years of business I have encountered only a very few dishonest people. Why then must law-abiding, honest, industrious people be so impugned as they are by this move to tax the interest on their investments before they receive it? I can cite a number of cases where the only income is from investments and that at present too little to warrant paying any income tax at all.

McCarthyism

Your newspaper deserves great credit for its campaign against McCarthyism. McCarthyism has undermined the foundations of our Americanism and has impaired our national security. It has bred disunity, fear and confusion at home, and, in other countries, serious distrust of the intelligence, stability and morale of our people. It has induced ridicule and contempt for our two-party political system in a campaign year. It has developed such extreme factional bitterness as to justify Washington's anxiety that thus our great Republic might ultimately perish. It has ruined reputations, and thus deprived its victims of the ability to earn a living.

McCarthyism and the frightened, deluded followers of this barbarous cult have aided and abetted the Politburo in the prosecution of its nefarious aims. In our last election year Stalin imposed the Berlin blockade. This time he has been emboldened to shoot down our airmen over the Baltic and intensify his threats of aggression all over the world, from the Dardanelles to Scandinavia and the Far East.

Obviously the immediate purpose of this man is, pursuant to the advice of his friend and mentor, to keep throwing mud until it sticks to Mr. Acheson. As for the facts, there is no reliable evidence whatever that a single Communist, or disloyal person, let alone 205, is in our State Department. There is strong evidence that there are none.

The fallacy of substituting the open-hearing committee system in its present perverted guise, which McCarthy has recreated, for our time-honored court system designed for the effective detection, proof and punishment of crimes of disloyalty, should be obvious to all. It must be remembered that in all the recent trials justice both to our Government and to the accused has been accomplished, or is now in process, solely by the approved methods of our court system. Many feel that the committee system has to its credit, if nothing else, the application of sufficient pressure on the Department of Justice to insure effective presentation of evidence to grand juries resulting in trials and convictions. Even assuming that this reaction is justified, the same result could undoubtedly have been attained by the conference method.

In the Amerasia case, for instance, although the sole responsibility to initiate criminal proceedings rests with the Attorney General, his awareness of the present serious situation, as well as his integrity and ability, cannot be doubted. It may be assumed that he would welcome an opportunity to discuss with a carefully chosen committee of Congress what, if anything, should now be done.

The members of such a committee should be men who could be trusted to place the interests of their country above party and political ambition, to resist the allure of sensational headlines and to respect confidences. Senators Lodge and McMahon have given ample evidence of possessing such qualities. They could, no doubt, select or approve others of a similar type to serve with them.

One of the most insidious, misleading and dangerous slogans used in the present controversy is "Where there is smoke there must be fire." Even if it were true that smoke results only from fire, in the present situation the smoke is merely from a bonfire of dead leaves started by a man who is euphemistically called by Republican politicians a "screwball." It would do no harm whatever if it were only recognized for what it really is and if each of us carefully refrained from spreading the flames by throwing on more rubbish.

The writer has been an active lawyer in private practice and with the Governument for some 40 years. He was in the Department of State for a short time during the war. Although an independent by conscience, until he recently became a disfranchised resident of Washington, he has usually voted the straight Republican ticket. On several occasions he was urged by responsible Republican groups to run for the Senate. Although, undoubtedly, many share his views, he is not authorized to express the opinion of any one else on the subject discussed in this letter. A CITIZEN.

'Veiled' Power In Far East

By Malvina Lindsay

Effect on U. S.

WE OPEN our newspaper, see a photograph of a woman in a sari. She is India's Minister of Health, Rajkuinan Armit Kaur, now serving as chairman of the World Health Organization's third annual assembly in Geneva.

Or we see pictured behind a wire cart in a Chicago chain grocery store Begum Liaquat Ali Khan, currently on tour of this country with her husband, the Prime Minister of Pakistan. We remember she organized the Pakistan Women's National Guard.

Or we see that Madame Pandit, India's Ambassador to the United States, is addressing an important assemblage. Or we read of the business and professional progress—including equal pay for equal work—of Turkish women, or of the political activity of Syrian women, given the vote last year. Or an item may relate that another embassy wife from the East is explaining her country to a Washington luncheon group.

What's going on here? we ask.

This expression of Eastern feminism is evidence of a social revolution now under way—one that may greatly influence the great world revolution of mass production that Peter Drucker, author of The New Society, calls a "made in America" product.

FOR IF the women of the East are now on the march, as many authorities report, their first activity in the world outside their veils and curtains will be to seek more decent and comfortable living for their families. They are likely to turn their political power to the conquest of hunger, squalor, disease, untimely death. This country's Point Four, for which 35 million dollars has been aproved by Senate and House Committees, could be their best ally in this, also this Nation's best diplomacy.

Women are beginning to be a force in Asia "for the first time since the Moguls," says Dr. Ross E. Moore, head of the Technical Collaboration Branch of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, who recently returned from a three-month mission that included the Middle East and southeast Asia.

These upsurging Eastern women, Dr. Moore reports, don't want to wait on grandiose industrial plans for their proverbial "new carpet." Rather they look to Point Four for help in small practical projects that can be started without delay. These might include improvement of food production, establishment of health and hygiene programs and simple industries. Some American women leaders believe they need above all techniques to lighten their primitive housewifery.

BUT HOW much are the interests of these emerging women of the East to be considered in the administration of the Point Four program? The bill provides for an advisory board, including businessmen, to be set up to help in administering the program. Certainly women should be on that board—especially in view of Dr. Moore's statement that the fate of Point Four rests on the rising power of the women in the areas where it is to be applied.

If the buying habits of the West extend to the East, Eastern women eventually will have a big influence on American markets and trade. As standards of living are raised, they will, like women of all ages and places, reach out insistently for the new comforts needed and dreamed about. Any Point Four program should consider well their tastes, attitudes, habits, needs, trends.

How will world political forces be affected by this feminine upsurge in the East? In this field women can be less generalized about. But their special sensitivity to the well-being of their families will help determine their leanings in their ideology.

Today they are full of curiosity about the American way of living. News of what the great mass production revolution has brought to the American woman in comfort, well-being, adornment, has spread widely.

That revolution is now spreading to their own countries. Mr. Drucker predicts that as underdeveloped regions begin to industrialize along mass production lines, they will follow our example. What we make of this revolution as a human institution, he says, will determine its ultimate strength and success.

Mail Once a Day

Your front-page article of May 19 regarding the District of Columbia postoffice carrying out Postmaster General Donaldson's order of one delivery per day of mail signifies a blow to one of the most vital organizations of our country.

Does Mr. Donaldson know the history of the mail from the Pony Express days to the present time? If he does, I am sure he will remember the mail could not be stopped then, nor will it be stopped now.

Perhaps he will change the inscriptions over the doors of the main postoffice:

"Messenger of Sympathy and Love
Servant of Parted Friends
Consoler of the Lonely
Bond of the Scattered Family
Enlarger of the Common Life
Carrier of News and Knowledge
Instrument of Trade and Industry
Promotor of Mutual Acquaintance of Peace and of Goodwill Among Men and Nations."

Such an order should be rescinded and our mail kept at normal.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Cold War Oracle

HOW MANY atom bombs do the Russians have? How many will they have in 1952? In 1954? What will happen when Stalin dies—and incidentally what is the real state of Stalin's health? How much resistance will there be in the satellite countries if war comes, and can resistance be promoted in time of peace? How strong is the Communist fifth column in France? In Norway? In Indonesia? Are the Soviets ready to risk war over Berlin?

Such questions are for the most part unanswerable. Yet American policy must be based on a shrewd guess at the answers. The chief guesser, the oracle whom the makers of policy must consult, is the director of the Central Intelligence Agency. That is why the directorship of the CIA is one of the most crucial, and the most agonizingly difficult, of cold war jobs.

The present oracle is Rear Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter, who has done a good job under exceedingly difficult circumstances. His worst troubles have arisen from the fact that he is a mere rear admiral, a lower order of animal in the forest of Washington brass. At any rate, Hillenkoetter was loaned to the CIA by the Navy, and his three-year tour of duty has come to an end. He is therefore preparing to hand on the poisoned chalice to someone else, and thankfully abandon the Washington bearpit for the tranquillity of ocean service.

AT PRESENT, the most likely receiver of the poisoned chalice seems to be either Lieut. Gen. Bedell Smith, the able former Ambassador to Moscow, or the equally able deputy director of ECA, William Foster. Whoever accepts the assignment will find it a hideously difficult one.

Intelligence estimates deeply affect every aspect of foreign and defense policy. Intelligence is thus a potent weapon in the hands of any official intent on promoting his favorite policy. This is why an intelligence agency inevitably becomes the center of bitter, shiv-sticking, no-holds-barred warfare within the Government.

This is also why, in the tension brought on by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's empire-building proclivities, the State Department is determined that the new CIA chief shall not be a creature of the Pentagon. Indeed, any secret intelligence head must be wholly independent of everyone but the President. It is absolutely essential that he have the personal stature, rank, and ability to defy when necessary the wrath of any and every official in Washington, up to and including Cabinet rank.

Both Smith and Foster are considered to have this quality of independence, which is one reason why their names stand high on the lists of possible CIA chiefs, which are now being passed around. Other names have of course been discussed. Former Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett, it is generally agreed, would make an ideal appointment, but Lovett has let it be known that nothing on earth would persuade him to take the job.

William Jackson, a New York lawyer with intelligence experience, has been tentatively considered. So has the able Ambassador to France, David Bruce, and one or two others. But Bruce is badly needed in his present post and most of the others are probably disqualified. So the finger points, for the present, at either Foster or Smith.

THE FINAL decision on whether to offer the assignment to Smith, Foster, or another, will, of course, rest with Truman. In the nature of things, a secret intelligence chief must be very much the President's man. Moreover, Truman himself is deeply interested in secret intelligence matters. He regularly studies the special reports prepared for him by the CIA as the day's first order of business and he frequently orders a special briefing by the intelligence chief. Thus it is essential that the CIA head be a man in whom the President has personal confidence.

The appointment is obviously of immense importance at this stage in the cold war. For the rolls of the CIA will not henceforth be confined to the passive collection of secret intelligence. Clearly the subject is not one for detailed public discussion. But it is obvious on the face of it that the Soviet Union has heretofore enjoyed a virtual monopoly in the twilight zone of clandestine subversion and organized resistance.

It is equally obvious that the Soviet system itself, with far graver real weaknesses than the Western world, is by no means invulnerable to this sort of pressure. The new CIA chief will have the task of breaking the Soviet monopoly, a task which must be done if the cold war is to be won. The CIA head will thus become one of the key figures in the conduct of the cold war. Both Foster and Smith are exceedingly able, well-qualified men. But if one or the other is offered the post, and is so foolhardy as to accept it, he will have his job cut out for him.

North Carolina Race

By Marquis Childs

Graham's Struggle For Reelection

DOWN IN North Carolina they are seeing the windup of a campaign that sums up a good bit of our political life today.

Childs

Whatever the outcome, it is bound to have an influence far beyond the borders of the State.

The three principals in the Democratic primary are like the characters in a political morality play. They concentrate in themselves the virtues and the vices, the triumphs and the failings of our system.

First on the list is the present Senator, Frank Graham, who was appointed to the Senate after nearly 20 years as president of the University of North Carolina. By his ardent admirers, and they are legion in North Carolina, Graham is considered a kind of homespun saint.

A short, thickset man, his face reflects the goodness and the earnestness that are at the base of his character. He has worked long and hard for the changes that have brought North Carolina to the forefront in the South in education, good roads, better race relations and so on.

POLITICALLY Graham has the innocence of a saint. This led him in the past to lend his name to certain organizations with a leftist coloring and the opposition is now trying to use these affiliations against him. He is also naive about the cost of big-time politics. At the outset of the current campaign, Graham is said to have assured his friends:

"Don't worry about expenses. I've saved up $7000 and I'm sure that will be more than enough."

But it is the high cost of an intensive State-wide campaign which just now concerns Graham's backers. This is said to be no worry at all to his leading opponent, Willis Smith, a highly successful lawyer at Raleigh.

Smith has carefully and assiduously followed the way of the Southern conservative. He has always said and done exactly the right things and his reward has been the proper board of directorships and the presidency of the American Bar Association. Representative of the dominant group that wants to keep the South as it is, Smith is an able exponent of things as they are.

The third character in this morality play is former Senator Robert R. Reynolds—"Ouah Bob" out of the demagogic past. But his demagogery is today a little dated, its edges curled with a weary cynicism, lacking the gusto that "Ouah Bob" once put into it. As a consequence, Reynolds is considered likely to be a poor third in the race.

While the lines of demarcation might be expected to be sharp on the basis of these differences, this is not entirely true. Some wealthy and influential men are supporting Graham out of personal devotion. According to Graham's backers, James Gray, president of the executive committee of the Reynolds Tobacco Co., has told Graham that he will vote for him. Because he is soon to assume the presidency of the university, Gordon Gray, now on assignment by President Truman to try to find ways and means of closing Europe's dollar gap, is maintaining an impartial position.

THE BEST guess on the outcome of the contest is that while Graham will lead, with Smith a strong second, he will not get an outright majority of the votes. This will necessitate a run-off between Smith and Graham to be held a month later.

Another campaign will cost a lot more money. And Graham's backers are fearful that the votes cast for "Ouah Bob" may in the run-off go to the conservative Smith.

Party leaders who are working hard for Graham, such as Jonathan Daniels, Democratic National Committeeman and executive editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, fear that his defeat would help to insure the success of the Dixiecrat movement throughout the South. They believe that with Graham's reelection North Carolina could serve as an effective bridge to rebuild the organization of the regular Democrats. Thus the result will have national repercussions.

But the decision in North Carolina may be seen in an even larger context. Because of the inner contradictions growing out of the uneasy union between North and South the Democratic Party is threatened with a paralysis of inaction. We have seen this in session after session of Congress in which there are nominal Democratic majorities.

The larger question then is whether men of Graham's progressive intentions and essential good will can find acceptance within the framework of the party. It may well be that the controls are passing into the hands of the stout apostles of things as they are.

Leaders in Trade, Professions, Politics Laud Post's Proposal

fense and the defense of reason, responsibility and liberty in our free society. Our governmental machinery and present procedures, legislative and executive, require rescue from a controversy seemingly beyond their power to resolve."

John A. Reilly, president, The Second National Bank, Washington, D. C.—"I was very much impressed with the editorial . . . 'The Road Back to America.' It is a most timely message and one that every American should read."

Herman W. Steinkraus, president, Bridgeport Brass Co., Bridgeport, Conn., former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce: "I heartily favor your recommendation that an unpartisan Commission on National Security be created to make studies and give the American people a trustworthy statement of the salient facts affecting our national security.

"Such a commission composed of outstanding citizens could go a long way to clear the air of present uncertainty and deep concern among our people and help us to again become a united Nation with clear understanding of our problems and with new trust in each other.

"We will then be able to meet our national and international obligations with confidence, with courage and with true faith that we can lead the way toward developing a better world."

Colgate W. Darden, jr., president, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.: "I find myself in hearty accord with your appraisal of the difficulties which beset us. But I do not believe that a commission of national security will accomplish what you hope because I do not believe that they can be supplied with all of the information required for an accurate determination of our situation. My guess is that unanimity of opinion on some of the most vital issues will not be achieved. And minority reports will add to the present uncertainty and fright."

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.): "Your editorial . . . rings the bell. You outline a compelling program for action. We must blot out the shadow that Russia casts over us and seems to wean us of our strength. The formation of a commission on national security which you suggest to survey the important aspects of our national security and whatever menace of a fifth column exists would expel the doubts that plague us. The formation of such a commission would inspire us back on the highroad to peace and prosperity. I shall offer a companion bill to the one offered by Senator Humphrey creating such a commission."

Henry J. Kaiser, sr., industrialist: "I am delighted that The Washington Post has men of caliber who can write an editorial so strong and so impressive that it has attracted the interests of the best minds in the Nation."

"It brings into clear-cut focus the greatest issues of our times. The proposals unquestionably will have and should have the serious attention of our national leadership and result in a profound influence on the direction that this Nation takes."

Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.): "The Washington Post editorial has a great deal of merit. The only questions that arise in my mind have to do with the execution or mechanics of the proposal. For example, I think it would be better if Congress rather than the President selected the members of the proposed nonpartisan commission. If the President were to name them, it would be a case of the executive investigating the executive. Also I think it would be a good idea to limit the scope to investigation of the Communists in Government charges, pretty much as Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) proposed. We should take first things first, rather than attempt to cover the waterfront in one inquiry. If we get into a broader field, we might spread the investigation too thin.

"I have made some suggestions to Senator Lodge for possible changes in his resolution after giving the matter a lot of thought. My suggestion to Mr. Lodge was that both parties in the Senate (or Congress) reach an understanding, through a party agreement, on the personnel of the commission. The resolution might properly provide for appointment of two members of the commission by the Vice President and Speaker and the remaining two by the minority leaders in both houses. The commission itself should be empowered to select a counsel of the very highest caliber.

"Whether we approve of the McCarthy technique or not the country is demanding a housecleaning. Such a completely nonpartisan commission, with both parties in Congress selecting the personnel, would show to what extent a housecleaning is necessary. I doubt whether a broader investigation at this time would be productive of the results sought."

Gordon E. Hyde, president Federal Advertising Agency, New York: "It is one of the most constructive pieces of sound thinking that I have noted in many a day.

"You have done a real service to the Nation in publishing it and I want to add my sincere congratulations as well as thanks to you and your associates for spreading such a statement on the public record."

Patrick Murphy Malin, executive director American Civil Liberties Union, New York: "Your editorial . . . is a brilliant exposition of the issue and warrants careful reading by the American public. Congratulations for presenting such a rounded and reasoned argument and taking a forthright stand on a baffling national problem, which so far has been discussed primarily in its political aspects, and with too little regard for the basic American principles of freedom.

"While your statement encompasses the entire field of security, including the question of civilian defense and military spending, I think you will be interested in knowing that it will receive the most serious attention of a special committee of the Union which is now examining our position concerning the Federal loyalty program. I feel too, that your editorial will be extremely helpful in our work at the Capital, which is being expanded in the near future to include the establishment of a Washington office.

"Your statement has given new heart to those of us working daily on civil liberties problems, for we realize that only by elevating the line of public discussion on this problem can a program be drawn up and effected in accordance with the highest principles of our American democracy."

Everett Case, president Colgate University: "At this stage in the battle for men's minds, no more important service can be rendered to our country than the appeal to sober common sense voiced by The Post in Monday's editorial.

"As the world's great citadel of freedom, our first job as Americans s to demonstrate anew the power and the unity of freedom. Whether for the purposes of this demonstration or of ferreting out the Fifth Column, no worse technique could be devised than the orgy of reckless charges and irresponsible name-calling n which some of us have recently been indulging. Such an orgy can only be destructive not of the forces that threaten us but of the confidence in ourselves and in each other which is the basic source of our strength as a people. Whenever and wherever the press reminds us of this all-important truth, it is n fact the voice of America."

Louis S. Cates, chairman of the board, Phelps Dodge Corp., New York: "Have read with much interest your editorial of May 22. Thoroughly agree that Communist infiltration in Executive departments is matter of great concern for the country and that our citizens in general are uncertain whether this danger is being properly guarded against. I agree with you that, without interfering in any way with the congressional power to investigate the Executive branches of the Government, the appointment of a Commission of National Security, to be composed of leading citizens, with genuine bipartisan agreement on its membership, would be in the public interest."

James R. Killian, jr., president Massachusetts Institute of Technology: The statesmanlike discussions and proposals in your editorial "The Road Back to America" make a constructive contribution to a desperate situation. I congratulate you on the saneness of your analysis and I share with you the urgent feeling that we must halt the irresponsible and fear-laden procedures which are so wholly foreign to the true American spirit."

L. K. Miller, Editor The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, Mass.: "Glad to reprint as public service the magnificent editorial which appeared as page ad in New York Herald-Tribune this morning."

Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.): With respect to the editorial of The Washington Post re the establishment of a Commission on National Security certainly the stated objectives of the commission recommended by The Washington Post are worthy; certainly also we have a right to expect that these objectives are being vigorously pursued by the responsible agencies of Government which are charged with responsibility for our national security.

"Assuredly the thinking of the Nation's leading citizens should be sought on an unpartisan basis in connection with these grave matters, involving as they do the life and death of our citizens. Senator Vandenberg has already recommended a bipartisan commission to study post-Marshall Plan economic aid. A bipartisan commission has also been suggested by Senator Lodge regarding Communist infiltration in the State Department.

"With respect to all other aspects of our national security, we should, it seems to me, be careful that we do not complicate the task of those in Congress and in the executive branch who are devoting themselves to other urgent questions.

"The creation of such a commission might also be interpreted as a vote of no confidence in those who are struggling with these problems. Moreover, while such a commission might possibly prove helpful to those who are engaged in the whole field, let us not fall into the error of thinking that we can overcome our difficulties simply by the creation of another commission."

House Group Seeks to Force Testimony on Army Center

A House Armed Services subcommittee asked authority yesterday to force Mrs. Sally Dewey to testify on her charges that the St. Louis Army Finance Center was shot with security risks and mishandled millions in Federal funds.

The decision to seek subpena power was reached after Mrs. Dewey, a former employe of the center, rejected an invitation to appear voluntarily today. She said in St. Louis that it would do no good to repeat the charges she already made before another congressional group.

Simultaneously, the General Accounting Office—Congress' fiscal watchdog—reported it had been unable to prove or disprove Mrs. Dewey's claim that a woman employe of the center once tried to "get away" with 700 GI allotment checks.

Charles Johnson, GAO legislative attorney, testified that the investigation was stymied because it began too late. He said many workers who might have known of the alleged incident no longer are employed at the center.

Already Submitted Evidence

In rejecting the committee's invitation, Mrs. Dewey said she already had submitted her evidence "in complete detail" to the Army Inspector-General, Army Counter-Intelligence, and a House Postoffice subcommittee.

She added in a telegram to Committee Chairman Paul J. Kilday (D., Tex.), that another trip to Washington would be a "further waste of public funds." Kilday said the committee didn't agree and decided to seek subpena powers which it now lacks.

If the authority is granted, as seemed likely, Mrs. Dewey either must make the trip or face a possible contempt citation. The authority would enable the committee to pay her travel expenses.

Mrs. Dewey's charges touched off investigations by two House groups and several Government agencies, including the Army itself.

Peron Loan Declared Move for 'Solidarity'

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

The United States decision to grant Argentina a 125-million-dollar loan represents a considered reversal of our policy toward the Peron government.

The money will go to pay off American exporters, who for two years have had much of their working capital tied up in unpaid Argentine bills. American private banks and manufacturers are considering a further credit of 75 million dollars to help Argentina buy farm equipment in this country.

What does the State Department have in mind? There are several considerations. Economically, the first objective is to bail out our exporters and get Argentine-American trade back to normal. We also want more favorable treatment for United States firms in Argentina, long subject to harassments of various kinds.

The political objective may be summed up in the omnibus phrase "hemisphere solidarity." Specifically, we want Argentina to ratify the Rio de Janeiro defense pact. The cold war is today the overriding consideration, and the State Department fears that if the Peron government should be forced out by economic difficulties, it might be supplanted by something worse.

Runaway Inflation

For two years Argentina has been in economic trouble, most of it self-induced. At the end of the war, she was one of the world's most prosperous nations, with a booming market in agricultural exports, and one and a half billion dollars worth of foreign exchange.

Today the country is suffering from runaway inflation. She has squandered most of her gold and dollars, doubled her national debt, alienated her best customers and almost destroyed agricultural production.

This exceptional achievement was largely the work of Peron's former economic czar, Miguel Miranda. Miranda made some fatal if plausible miscalculations: he thought another war was imminent, he believed that Marshall Plan dollars would flow to Argentina, and he thought he could keep Argentina's agricultural prices indefinitely in the stratosphere.

The Peron government embarked on an ambitious and ill-conceived program of industrial self-sufficiency at the expense of agriculture. It set up the Argentine Trade Promotion Institute (IAPI) to buy meat and grains at low fixed prices from farmers and sell them abroad at extortionate profits. The proceeds were funneled into manufacturing, public works and rearmament.

This policy had disconcerting results. The high export prices infuriated the British, who reduced purchases. The low internal prices discouraged farmers, who cut back output to levels far below those of the 1930s. And the public works and armaments compounded internal inflation.

By last year agricultural production had dropped so far Argentina could not meet her export commitments. She is now short of foreign exchange, plagued by runaway prices, and unable to obtain credit abroad until past debts are cleared.

Good Credit Risk

Despite the botch she has made of recent economic policy, Argentina would rate as a good credit risk. She has never defaulted on a foreign loan. Nevertheless, the present credit has met with little enthusiasm from the Treasury, the Federal Reserve or the Export-Import Bank.

The State Department seems neither to have asked nor received commitments against Argentina's further pursuit of present inflationary policies. This being the case, there is no reason to suppose our loan will solve any underlying problems.

This leaves our political objectives on shaky ground. Certainly we cannot save the Peron Government—even assuming this to be desirable—by paying off our own exporters. As for buying Peron's adherence to our hemispheric policy, this is less likely still.

If there is one thing clear from Argentine foreign policy under all regimes—Radical, Conservative or Peronista—it is that Argentina has no intention of being the tail on the Yankee kite. She has pursued and will pursue her own independent policy, whether we like it or not.

There seems no good reason to continue a useless vendetta with the Buenos Aires government. But our relations are a sphere for hard bargaining, not wishful fancy.

The only concrete objectives we have achieved by our loan are certain exchange concessions to American airlines, oil companies and packing houses in Argentina. These concessions are naturally welcome. But it is a serious question whether they justify this loan.

New York, May 23 (U.P.).—Steel production this week will rise to a new all-time tonnage record, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

With the Nation's mills operating at 101.8 percent of so-called rated capacity, output this week will total 1,940,600 tons.

FAIRFAX COUNTY'S SCHOOL CRISIS

by Agnes E. Meyer

Can parents and teachers cushion the educational crisis in Fairfax County? That's a question Agnes E. Meyer answers in this series of two articles in The Washington Post.

In these articles, Mrs. Meyer clearly shows the dangerous, overcrowded conditions in Fairfax County schools. She describes the poor and inadequate facilities in many of the schools and points out that funds are desperately needed to solve the problem. And she tells how the outmoded county government, created for earlier days and overwhelmed by sudden expansion, is unable to cope with the critical situation.

No taxpayer, educator or parent in Fairfax County can afford to miss this series on the vital subject of educating America's future citizens.

Neon Lights to Warn D. C. Motorists Against Illegal Turns

District Commissioners yesterday decided to install neon "No left turn" signs at busy intersections because of complaints that printed signs are too difficult to read.

George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, said the lighted signs—like those now used to regulate pedestrian crossings at some points—will be on only during rush hours, or whenever turns are prohibited.

They will be tried first at the intersections of 14th st. nw. and Constitution ave., and at Pennsylvania ave. nw. and East Executive ave., Keneipp said. If successful, they may replace all printed signs, he stated.

The Commissioners also approved Keneipp's recommendations to:

(1) Install stop signs on Varnum st. nw., where it crosses 4th st. and on the cutoff road leading west off Rock Creek pkwy. where it joins the lower level of K st. nw. under the Whitehurst Freeway; (2) permit parking on the east side of Reno rd. nw., between Warren and Yuma sts. except during rush hours; (3) extend from 20 minutes to one hour the parking limit on the south side of Calvert st. nw. in the 2300 block near the American Security & Trust Co.

Traffic officials also have under study a plan to recruit a group of citizens to inform police of traffic violations that would otherwise go undetected. Keneipp reported without recommendation to the Commissioners' traffic advisory board Monday night on such a plan operating in Dallas, Tex. It was referred to a committee for study.

Sidotti Reappointed

Phone Files In Crime Quiz

the committee had in mind in making the request. In fact, the committee's chief investigator, who arrived in Washington only yesterday to take his post, made that clear. He is Harold G. Robinson, 47-year-old former FBI agent, former chief investigator for the Senate (Truman) War Investigating Committee and until last week chief investigator for the California Crime Commission.

Robinson said that when the State of California cut off the Nation-wide Continental Press race wire service about a year ago, "they took to the phones." Robinson said the State commission thereupon began examining phone toll call records and readily determined the new flow of information on which bookmaking is based.

It was indicated yesterday that Senate investigators will do the actual checking of phone records. They could start by going over the toll calls for phones known to have been used by such people as the 150 underworld figures, gamblers and racketeers about whom the Justice Department recently has been collecting information.

Success of this phone checking technique was testified to by New York City officials during the recent hearings of a Senate Commerce Subcommittee on proposed bills to end interstate transmission of betting information.

New York police, cooperating with New Jersey authorities, got leads on Frank Erickson and Joe Adonis, gambling figures, by tracting extensive calls to a restaurant and a home movie exchange office in Cliffside, N. J., across the Hudson from New York. The restaurant was described by the police as Adonis' hangout and the movie exchange as Erickson's.

"As soon as it is indicated that retention of the records in question for the additional eriod is no longer necessary, the commission will notify you immediately."

New York officials subsequently raided Erickson's New York headquarters, but it has been reported that a couple of truckloads of records were taken out of the New Jersey movie office at night a day or two later by parties unknown.

A similar check of telegrams is a likely possibility but, FCC officials said, the Senators have not yet asked for a hold order. Telegrams are kept six months by Western Union at present.

Reported Aide For Erickson Ready to Talk

New York, May 23 (U.P.).—A man who listed his employer as "Jack Lennon," a name police believe is one of the "front names" used by Gambler Frank Erickson, agreed today to appear for questioning at the offices of District Attorney Frank S. Hogan.

William J. Sullivan, who said he was a "clerk" when he filed a 1948 tax return, agreed to the questioning through his attorney, Harold Frankel. A folder titled "William J. Sullivan" was among records confiscated from Erickson's office in connection with a grand jury investigation of Erickson's alleged Nation-wide gambling operations.

Sullivan is the first of 24 persons the district attorney said would be questioned about Erickson's files. All their names were found among documents seized in the raid on Erickson's office.

Meanwhile, officials said that Harry Richards, $70-a-week financial accountant for Erickson, is "cooperating 100 percent" in the investigation. Richards is being held in $100,000 bail as a material witness.

Sullivan, 52, is employed by his son, Vincent J. Sullivan, 28, as a commercial photographer, according to his attorney.

Frankel said that Sullivan "has not been in hiding" and that he had been at his home in Maspeth, Queens, since the investigation began.

Maher Still Seeking Data

Daniel B. Maher yesterday said he is still compiling information for the District Commissioners in connection with the Richitt report and will get it to them "as soon as I can."

Maher said he could not say when he would be able to complete his work on the report. The special assistant corporation counsel told the commissioners in a letter of resignation last Friday he felt he could complete all work now assigned to him before June 15.

The Maher report was presented to Commissioner John Russell Young April 6, five weeks after the explosion in the police department that followed Capt. Anthony Richitt's disciplinary transfer from No. 3—or "White House"—Precinct to No. 8 Precinct.

On May 11, the Commissioners held what Young called a "lengthy" discussion of the report and then asked Maher for information to "clarify" certain points in it.

The report presumably deals with reported erasures in Third Precinct records and perhaps other aspects of the differences between Richitt and his chief, Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett.

Richitt has claimed he was transferred for giving information to a House District subcommittee investigating crime here. Barrett denied this and said he was shifted for insubordination.

Sentence of Bridges' Attorney is Upheld

San Fancisco, May 23 (AP).—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today affirmed the six-month jail sentence imposed on Vincent Hallinan, chief defense attorney for Harry Bridges.

Hallinan was sentenced for contempt of court by Federal District Judge George B. Harris during Bridges' recent perjury trial.

The circuit court's opinion held that Hallinan's conduct had been "inexcusable" on any of the grounds urged in the appeal.

DO YOU smoke too much? If you do, there's one way to stop. When Dr. Arthur Ellen comes to the Merryland Club again, have him pick you as a subject to be hypnotized.

One young man, who had merely stopped in for a drink, last week, is now rid of his smoking habit.

First he volunteered to sit on the stage with several others while Dr. Ellen tried to hypnotize the group. He didn't fall asleep, and was shooed off the stage in favor of the others.

After the show, the young man called the hypnotist over and apologized; he confessed he had been concentrating on "showing that it wouldn't work." In a penitent state, he came over to our table, and the enthusiastic doctor had him unconscious in 20 seconds. During that time I was allowed to stick pins in him, and the doctor instructed him that he would awaken, but if he heard him speak the word "blue" he would fall asleep immediately.

Before waking the subject, however, Dr. Ellen led him to the stage to stand motionless for almost 10 minutes—with head bowed and arms outstretched.

After coming to, the subject admitted in a casual conversation that he smoked, and wished he didn't. And at the next show, when the young man just happened to hear the word "blue" again and fell asleep, he obediently described his birthdays year by year, was stretched out between two chairs and sat upon, and recalled the reason he was compelled to smoke.

Before awakening his subject, Dr. Ellen gave him these instructions: Don't smoke for three days. When you take it up, do it moderately, because you realize the reason you were compelled to reach for a cigarette, and realize it wasn't worth it.

Bottle Club Convicted of Charter Abuse

The United Nations Social Club, 1132 18th st., nw., has "abused" and "misused" its corporate charter, a District Court jury found yesterday.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut directed the jury to bring in the guilty verdict, after saying Monday the evidence favoring the club was "too flimsy."

The club is one of 12 after-hours spots that U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay is trying to close. He charges the clubs operate as "frauds" to violate District liquor and gambling laws, and not as educational, musical and charitable.

The Government will ask Judge Schweinhaut formally to dissolve the club Friday.

Of the 12, four have been dissolved by default, when the Government's motion to dissolve was not answered, two have been dissolved by judges, one suit has been dismissed by consent, and one club has been acquitted.

Of the three remaining, the Fin and Feathers Club, 1016 14th st. nw., is scheduled to go on trial Thursday.

Pound Value Cut Brings Bid For Alimony Decrease

Baltimore, May 23 (AP).—Former soldier Robert Burton is seeking a reduction in alimony payments to his former British bride on the contention that through devaluation of the pound the payments became excessive.

A Baltimore court last January ordered Burton, 27 to pay $30 a month for the support of his wife and 4-year-old daughter, who live in Bristol, England.

Mrs. Joy Windows Burton, the 23-year-old divorcee, is opposing the reduction. Court papers showed she argues that while the rate of exchange has been altered, her husband's ability to pay has not. Burton wants a 30 percent cut in alimony.

Their divorce decree was signed by Judge Joseph Sherbow in Circuit Court after Mrs. Burton testified by deposition that her husband wrote her he was in love with a girl in America and that he had canceled arrangements to bring her to the United States.

The right to speak or the right to remain silent was reaffirmed as a constitutional privilege a few years ago in a majority decision of the Supreme Court. Justice Jackson, speaking for the majority, said:

> "If there is any fixed star in our Constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion or matters of opinion, or force citizens to confess, by word or act, their faith therein."

This decision has now been overturned. The Supreme Court, in accepting the ruling of the Court of Appeals in the case of the 10 Hollywood writers, directors and producers, has now made it mandatory, on pain of imprisonment, to reveal such beliefs.

We Petition the Supreme Court for a Reconsideration of Its Refusal to Hear the Appeal of the Hollywood Ten Cited for Contempt by the House Un-American Activities Committee. We urge the Court to Present to the Entire Country a Definition of Constitutional Guarantees.

'One-Package' Fund Campaign Approved

Thirty community leaders yesterday agreed that it was a good idea to wrap the fund drives of all worthy causes into one package.

The group agreed that such a one-shot drive should emphasize use of voluntary payroll deductions in small and large businesses and in Government.

Appointment of a committee of top Government officials and others was suggested to urge Congress to authorize such deductions in governmental units.

The "single package" fund drive, considered a success in several large cities, would end the year-round stream of appeals by many causes.

Among those speaking for the idea yesterday was Dr. Henry F. Hubbard, executive vice chairman of the Federal Personnel Council, who recommended it for these reasons:

1. It would raise more funds because donors "wouldn't hold back" to meet other appeals coming up, as they do now. It would permit a more thorough canvass, blanketing persons now missed by the individual collections.

2. It would be "less confusing, annoying and embarrassing." Contributions to single drives have been declining because of the increase in the total number of drives.

3. It would mean lower administrative costs, time and effort for employers.

Yesterday's meeting was of an interim committee on a Multiple Fund Raising Campaign. Frank J. Luchs, who headed last year's Community Chest drive, presided at the session in the Riggs National Bank board room.

The enthusiastic response to the single over-all drive idea was tempered by the reaction of spokesmen for local chapters of several national groups, such as the American Red Cross, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the American Cancer Society.

Nat C. Wilson, manager of the D. C. chapter of the American Red Cross, said that under present policy of the national organization it "would not be possible for the D. C. chapter or any other chapter to join in one campaign." He said the matter will be placed before the Red Cross board of governors at a meeting June 25.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, executive director, D. C. Cancer Society, a branch of the American Cancer Society, said the national group in the past has felt the problem of cancer was so big, it was beyond inclusion in a comprehensive community drive.

He warned, too, that after the initial response to a single drive, the donations may dwindle.

Elwood H. Seal, chairman of the District Chapter, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said the local group could not participate in a single drive without authorization of national headquarters.

Luchs urged the local representatives to seek authority to join, noting that in other cities the participants have fared better collectively than individually.

Herbert P. Leeman, president, Federation of Citizens Associations, was more pointed. "We, the people who give the money, should be considered first, not the national and local groups that receive it," he said.

The meeting wound up with a decision to work on two fronts: To solicit indorsements of the single drive by the 125 organizations which initially considered the multiple appeals problem on May 10 and to obtain statements by local chapters of national groups on whether they could take part.

Athletic Yvonne Busts Into Song

By Richard L. Coe

MISS YVONNE DE CARLO, who is fast becoming the Doug Fairbanks of her sex, returns to us in "Buccaneer's Girl" at Keith's.

Whyvonne is a gal who always gets me into trouble. A chap up in Massachusetts writes me and my bosses every time I call her Whyvonne. He thinks it ungentlemanly. And my sophisticated friends groan every time I toss her a bone. Both sides are unjust to pore li'l me. About the lady, I only attempt to report.

While her claim to fame is, it seems to me, merely visual, her latest vehicle finds her busting out in song. She appears to have studied the records of Marlene Dietrich seriously and her ability to make the boys in the front rooms bellow with her is assured.

She is playing a Boston lady working her way through life in 1810. She winds up at what seems to be a mighty shady "school" run by Elsa Lanchester in New Orleans; one says "seems," because the film clearly indicates that this impressive palazzo is merely a sort of boarding house for entertainers for whom Elsa acts as agent. The fact remains, the audience laughed and laughed at Elsa's lush nest.

From here, Whyvonne immerses herself in Society, mauls the Governor's niece and contracts True Love for a sterling young type she met first as a pirate and then as the acceptable captain welcomed in New Orleans society.

It is through this fellow—Philip Friend—that Whyvonne is able to exert her Fairbanks prowess. She relishes a fight or two beneath his skull-and-crossbones mast and her sharp, Technicolor-white teeth bite his way to freedom on several occasions. She clambers up and down vines and rigging with more elan than most of us could summon.

The language Harold Shumate and Joseph Hoffman have composed for their star is not without style. Hands on her hips, battle in her eye, Whyvonne tells Elsa: "I still say you're making a mistake sending me to a fish fry. I belong in a drawing room." The terms "cow" and "witch" are quick on her tongue. Nor is Friend without his circumlocutions: "The sea lanes are vast. Where he is not I am. Where I am not he is."

Now please don't think I'm being ungentlemanly about Whyvonne and her material. Just a report, this, just a report.

"BUCCANEER'S GIRL." Universal-International release produced by Robert Arthur. Screen play by Harold Shumate and Joseph Hoffman from a story by Joe May and Samuel R. Golding. Photographed in Technicolor by Russell Metty. Music by Walter Scharf. Lyrics by Jack Brooks. Directed by Frederick de Cordova. At Keith's.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, who was a real fan of the musical plays which used to play the National, will find one much to his liking in the Gayety's "Brigadoon." . . . The President has taken, in private conversations, keen interest in the Capital's theaterless past, and though the White House calender is always a busy one, this admiring citizen hopes that he and the First Lady will manage to make a "Brigadoon" date during its three-week stay. . . . It's a show you'll love, honest, Mr. President.

WHOOPPEE! . . . Eve Arden's coming to Olney. . . . That comedienne who has breathed life into many a tired movie script will be the second star of the summer, playing the week of June 27 . . . Her vehicle: "Over 21." . . . Washingtonians will remember how she sparked Max Gordon's "Very Warm for May," a short-lived effort Max remembers every time he hears "All the Things You Are." . . . That song's vogue came too late to save the show, but Eve did her best . . . Her radio series has given her a great audience . . . The Olney box office, in Jordan's, 13th and G, will open Monday, June 5.

MILDRED HOYLE CORE, of the booming voice under the brick thatch of coiffure, is the author of the manuscript play chosen for production by the McLean Summer Theater, directed by Tommy Brent . . . Hers is a drama "The Centaurs," about an Air Force officer, paralyzed from the waist down, and his rehabilitation in the horsey set he grew up in . . . Mrs. Core is one of our town's most avid playgoers and 'twill be interesting to see a play she's written.

JAMES THURBER'S "The Last Flower" is the basis for one of Batya Heller's dances this evening at the annual program of the Jewish Community Center Modern Dance Group . . . The program starts in the auditorium at 16th and Q at 8:30.

"IL TROVATORE" will arrive on the Plaza screen Friday morning, a film of the Verdi opera made at the Rome Opera House . . . Gabriele Santini directs the organization's chorus and orchestra, with Enzo Mascherini, Gianna Pederzini and Gino Sinimberghi in the leading roles . . . Also on the bill will be Colonel de Basil's Ballet Russe dancing "Graduation Ball" to the Johann Strauss tunes . . . Wunderbar.

PIRATICAL MANNERS: Philip Friend is Yvonne De Carlo's thieving pal in "Buccaneer's Girl," the Technicolored romance of Old New Orleans at Keith's

Fuel Pumps Favor Driver, Studies Show

District area gasoline pumps are more likely to put the short-change bite on the gas station operators than on you motorists, it was disclosed here yesterday.

J. Thomas Kennedy, director of the District's Department of Weights, Measures and Markets, attested to the vagaries of local gas pumps at the thirty-fifth national conference on weights and measures, which opened yesterday at Wardman Park Hotel.

For the most part—in fact for 94.12 percent of the checkings—the output of local gasoline pumps is fair to everyone, he said. That is, if the pump's meter said you got 5 gallons, you got within 4 ounces either side of that measure, the legal tolerance. Four ounces gets you a half mile if your car is running 16 miles to the gallon.

Kennedy reported that of 7813 gas pump inspections made here during the year ended March 31, only 5.88 percent showed someone was being "gypped." These faulty pumps, in "by far the majority of cases," short-changed the station operators by putting out too much, rather than too little gas, he said.

Even at that, the Capital City's gas pumps are better than those in Seattle, Wash., according to the report of D. M. Turnbull of that city. In Seattle, he said, one out of every four pumps had to be condemned by city weights and measures inspectors.

Some 250 representatives of State agencies that police the fields of weights and measures are attending the national conference. They were welcomed yesterday at the start of their four-day conference by Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards and president of the conference.

Slain Redhead Buried; Police Press Inquiry

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 23 (Spl.).—The body of this town's mystery woman, a redhead of about 35 who was found brutally strangled near here May 10, was buried today by authorities, who continued to probe the crime.

Sheriff Paul Munson and Maryland State Trooper Harold Basore went to Columbus, Ohio, yesterday to verify information they feel will lead to identification of the woman, if not her murderer.

The body was found by a mushroom hunter one afternoon along the West Virginia bank of the Potomac River, across from Hancock, Md.

The obscure town of Hancock, 2 miles from here, may prove to be the key to the mystery.

A Blue Ridge Lines bus driver has identified the body as that of a woman he drove from Little Washington, Pa., to Hancock on May 5. The bus trip originated in Columbus, and the ticket agent there also identified the body as that of a woman who bought a ticket for Hancock May 5.

DETROIT, MAY 23.—Have a care, there, how you demean us sports writers and wonder out loud how we could make a living otherwise. And don't suggest we couldn't go down on that ball field and hit one out of the park.

Three of our guys are doing pretty well with that bat in the major leagues. Ted Williams, a baseball writer who authors three articles a week plus playing left field for the Red Sox, is leading the American League in home runs. Ralph Kiner, the Pittsburgh newspaperman who also has a by-line, is the home run champion in the National League.

POVICH

Latest of our fraternity to make good is a Detroit sports writer, George Kell, who now has a featured column in one of the Detroit dailies. When he isn't writing "Kell Tells" thrice weekly, he's making a nice living in a Tiger uniform, playing third base and defending the league batting championship he won last season.

So, nn-yah. We're beginning to flex our muscles, and play this game we write about. And no baseball-writing ball player has ever been a flop yet.

THERE WAS some distress in Detroit the other day, however, when Reporter Kell popped up with the bases full of Tigers in the ninth inning and they lost the ball game. One fan groaned about it, but his neighbor shushed him quickly. "Shut up," he said. "Anyway, Kell is writing good stuff."

The only trouble is, the business is full of spooks. For every writing player, a ghost walks in his shadow. It means gainful employment to some deserving (aren't they all) sportswriter with a passion for anonymity, and an appreciation of a paycheck.

The ghost-writing business reached something of a peak in Boston a couple of years ago, when that baseball-mad town had its Braves in the World Series against Cleveland. Just about every important member of the Braves were hired to cover the series for the slew of Boston papers, and in each case, of course, they had to hire a ghost writer.

That was because sometimes our ball players are not very, er, shall we say facile with the mother tongue or the written word. Anyway, it was a field day for the ghost writers.

MY FAVORITE ghost writer was, and still is, Mr. John Gilbert, of a Boston daily who was engaged to write the articles under the by-line of Eddie Stanky, the fiery second baseman who was the darling of Boston fans. Stanky pulled no punches on the ball field, was always a controversial figure, and whatever he authored, even remotely, figured to command big readership.

Well, Stanky's ghost gave it to 'em straight—what Stanky thought about the umpiring, the Braves-strategy, the Cleveland Indians, and everything else that happened. It was explosive stuff, and had Boston fans admiring Stanky's forthrightness. A real good ghost-writing job.

But the wonderful part about it was his ghost's reservation of the right to criticize his principal. In his own column, published alongside his Stanky pieces, ghost-writer Gilbert was giving Stanky unvarnished hell every day, for the very things he had ascribed to Stanky in the papers. Even though Stanky probably hadn't read the stuff before seeing it in print.

BACK IN MY favorite days, I had a fling at ghost-writing, too. I used to author the three-a-week football articles by Sammy Baugh. I interviewed him once, and went on my own for the rest of the season. Between us, Baugh and I were writing good stuff, I thought.

Under Baugh's name, Coach Ray Flaherty and I used to do a special Sunday feature, delineating with a diagram, some of the Redskins' famous plays. We ran out of plays at one point, and Flaherty devised one especially for the series. "We'll never use this play, but I always did think it would work," he said. It was labeled as "the variation of Redskin play on which Cliff Battles went 88 yards against the Giants."

A week later, following the Redskins' 73-0 defeat by the Bears, an angry subscriber wrote in: "How can the Redskins hope to win, with Sammy Baugh revealing all their best plays."

The triumph was No. 5 for Hudson, who won only 8 games last season

Del Miller Has 2 Winners At Rosecroft

Del Miller, 35-year-old driving star for William N. Reynolds, the North Carolina Tobacco tycoon, living up to his reputation last night by bringing home two straight winners before a crowd of 5000 at Rosecroft Raceway.

Miller cashed in the first half of the $2500 divided Fort Washington Purse, fourth event of the night, when he drove Niblick, 6-year-old chestnut, to victory by a neck over K. C. Fowler's Buddy L, from Mount Vernon, Ohio.

In the third race, Miller won with the favorite, Uncle Will, owned by George H. Tipling of Cleveland.

The Fort Washington honors, however, went to Shadydale Stock Farm's Mighty Pegasus, who beat Nola in a third-dash run-off for the top prize of the $2500 purse, by five lengths.

Mighty Pegasus, driven by Wilbur Ehlen, earlier had finished second in the fifh mile trot to the winner, Nola, while Mighty Pegasus provided a stnning upset in the seventh race.

There was no betting on this ninth race. The fans wagered a total of $194,358 for he eight races.

Home Lady and Electric Hal were the winning daily double combination. The 5-6 combination paid $237.20.

Home Lady paid $24.20, $10.20, and $4.60, beating James the Sixth by three lengths in the opening race.

Electric Hal, owned by Mrs. Joseph Eyler of Thurmont, Md., captured the second race, a mile pace like the first, returning $10.60, $4.60 and $3 to his backers.

Yost, Coan Hit Homers In Big Inning

with two strikes against him Slammin' Sammy lined a fiery single over Lipon's head that was worth two runs and a 3-2 lead for the Nats. Mele, though, was out at third trying to take two bases on the hit.

Dente wound up on second on the throw that caught Mele, so Merrill Combs was handed an intentional pass. Al Evans couldn't nudge 'em along with a short fly to Wertz, but Hudson himself then partook of the fun. He singled to center to score Dente with the fourth run of the inning.

That event brought in former Nat Calvert, who was an immediate failure. Yost saluted him with a soaring smash into the left center field seats that fetched in the fifth, sixth and seventh runs of the inning. And then, on the next pitch Coan also got his fifth of the year, banging the ball into the upper deck in right field.

A completely relaxed Hudson protected his six-run lead in the Detroit ninth by getting 'em out one-two-three, striking out Pinch Hitter Charley Keller as a final filip.

But for eight innings, the slow-balling Hutchinson was complete master of the Nats who got only one man as far as third base and were practically asking to be shut out.

Meanwhile, Johnny Groth and George Kell were getting in Hudson's hair. Kell opened the fourth inning with a two-bagger to left, and set the stage for Groth's two-out single to right that produced a 1-0 lead for the Tigers.

In the sixth, Kell again led off with one of his patented doubles to left and eventually Groth got him home with a long fly to Stewart. Trouble was, in light of the Nats' ninth, Groth didn't drive in enough runs.

IN SHORT . . . The season is resuming tomorrow for Steve Nagy who hasn't pitched a ball in two weeks. He'll face Cleveland in a night game. . . . Merrill Combs got a bit of promotion today. Bucky Harris moved him up from eighth to seventh in the batting order. . . . Ed Stewart's radically changed wide-open stance is drawing Harris' black looks.

Noren Takes Bat Practice, Dad Shags for Him

Irv Noren, the Nats' $70,000 rookie, operated on for appendicitis just 12 days ago, yesterday tested his swing in a 20-minute drill.

He was so satisfied with the results that he said he'd be in uniform when the Nats return from their Western road trip Saturday. Facing Concessionaire Billy Robertson, Noren got off some long drives, including one which slammed against the rightfield scoreboard.

Chasing flies in the workout was Noren's father, who drove all the way in from Pasadena, Calif.

Bums Get Only 4 Hits Off Cubs' Left-Hander

Brooklyn, May 23 (AP).—Johnny Schmitz, Chicago's willowy southpaw, and an old Broklyn nemesis, hurled the Cubs to a 5-to-4 victory over the Dodgers today before 7969 at Ebbets Field.

It gave the Chicagoans a 3-1 edge on the Dodgers this season.

Schmitz allowed only four hits and was helped by home runs by Andy Pafko and Roy Smalley, both in the sixth inning. Smalley's blow came with one on. Pafko's smash, his seventh, was a solo effort.

Ralph Branca, making his third start for Brooklyn, was replaced by Rex Barney in the seventh inning after giving up all of Chicago's runs.

Boston, May 23 (AP).—Cincinnati's last-place Reds rushed over four runs in the seventh inning tonight, combining three hits with a walk and a throwing error, to thump Boston's Braves, 6-2. Knuckleballer Willard Ramsdell, making his first start for the Rhinelanders since he joined them from Brooklyn, went all the way for his second victory of the season.

Philadelphia, May 23 (AP).—Wally Westlake's eighth inning homer with the bases loaded broke up a scoreless pitching duel between Bill MacDonald and Russ Meyer and the Pittsburgh Pirates went on to whip the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 0, tonight. It was the first time the Phils have been shut out this season.

MacDonald, rookie right-hander from New Orleans making his first major league start, limited the phillies to three hits.

Maze Goes to Dickinson

Carlisle, Pa., May 23 (AP).—Frank R. Maze, 31-year-old line coach at Wesleyan University, today was appointed head football coach at Dickinson College.

About the Celebrities

By Bus Ham

BOB HOPE'S schedule for the next 10 days:

His regular Tuesday night radio broadcast from Hollywood last night.

All-night airplane trip, arrives in New York today to begin rehearsals for a television show Saturday—second in a series for which Hope reportedly will receive $200,000.

In Chicago Sunday, benefit appearance.

In Kansas City Monday to play golf with Byron Nelson for cerebral palsy fund.

Back in Hollywood for weekly radio show.

Next Wednesday (May 31), heading back East for the National Celebrities golf tournament and the big show at the Armory the night of June 3, which Robert will emcee.

BOB HOPE

CHICK EVANS and Jim McHale, playing in the British amateur this week, will fly back to this country in time for the Celebrities. Chick will arrive in New York at 5 a. m., June 3, take another plane to Washington in order to be on hand for the 12 noon start of the Celebrities.

A lady asked: "Is it necessary to have a camera permit to take pictures at the Celebrities tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club, June 3-4?"

Lady, the Celebrities is a paradise for the amateur cameraman. Just buy your tournament ticket, pick your photographic target and start shooting.

Harry Wismer, who emcees the Celebrities each year and keeps so busy he doesn't get to swing a stick in the tournament, had rounds of 77 and 78 in Detroit the past few days. He says playing so well helps him talk a better game when the Celebrities step to the first tee.

Helen Dettweiler, a regular in the Celebrities, will miss this year's fourth annual. She is recuperating from a major operation on the West Coast.

FROM JOHNNY DAWSON, considered by many to be the finest amateur golfer since Bob Jones was at his best:

"I am working night and day trying to put together a Country Club project for the Palm Springs Area (in California) so that it will be playable by next January 10. This is a prodigious task so I am just about giving up everything for the remainder of the summer months.

"The Western Open was held right in my backyard over this past weekend and I am thoroughly ashamed to tell you that I didn't even get out to see a single shot. You know with my intense love for golf that I must be busy.

"We have a great opportunity to really create a magnificent project in the desert area and I do not want to miss a moment away from the job. Creating a golf course in the desert is no easy task and I am determined that it shall be something to be proud of and become quite famous throughout the country.

"Thank you for the honor you have bestowed upon me by including me in the list of Celebrities. I'd give almost anything but this golf course to be with you."

June 3-4 at Army-Navy

Auerbach Attends Celebrities For Revenge: Heckle Mikan

RED AUERBACH, whose career as a professional basketball coach has been tormented for the past two years by the sight of George Mikan, is postponing a trip to New York to be in Washington for the National Celebrities Golf Tournament. He isn't staying to see Ben Hogan play, or Bob Hope, or the Bauer sisters.

"I'm sticking around to heckle Mikan," he said yesterday as he placed an order for two season tickets to the June 3-4 tournament at Army Navy. "He's wrecked my basketball teams for three years and I'm going to kid the dickens out of him on the golf course.

"And by the way, my wife's an Arthur Godfrey fan, so put me down for two tickets to the Celebrities show at the Armory on Saturday night." So be it, Red.

Bob Hope will emcee the big show at the Armory the night of June 3, a Saturday, with many of the Celebrities appearing on the program.

The golf field will include Hope, Thorpe, Arthur Godfrey, Babe Didrikson, Marlene and Alice Bauer, Patty Berg, Ben Hogan, Gene Sarazen, Henry Picard, Milton Berle, Walter Winchell, Toney Penna, Charlie Justice, Frank Leahy and dozens of other famous people.

Tickets for the golf tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club and for the Hope-Celebrities show, are on sale at the following places: Champion Sports Shop, 816 13th st. nw.; Fairway Sports Shop, 1328 G st. nw.; Sports Center, 8th and D sts. nw., and in the lobby of The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.

Fazio, Harper, Bassler Win PGA Places

Richmond, Va., May 23 (AP).—George Fazio of Woodmont Country Club, Washington, Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., and Charles Bassler of Baltimore, today won the Middle Atlantic area's three berths in the National Professional Golfers' Association tournament with a display of parbusting golf despite a heavy shower.

Fazio, luckiest of the lot, played only the thirty-sixth hole in the rain. Harper and Bassler, midway the final nine holes when the storm broke, finally sought shelter when lightning and thunder were added to the downpour. They finished on a sopping course almost an hour later than expected.

Fazio and Harper put together rounds of 70-71—141 each on the 6708-yard, par 72 layout of the James River Course of the Country Club of Virginia. Bassler, around this morning in 72, added a 71 this afternoon for a 143.

Walter Romans of Baltimore, who led the morning round with a blazing 33, 36—69, faded badly in the afternoon, taking a 38, 42—80 to finish well back in the field with a 149.

Dear Folks: At Pimlico

The Maryland Racing Commission, with little or no fanfare, has adopted a betting rule that should be understood by every customer—flat or harness. It concerns the daily double. If the first has been run and the second is called off for any reason, daily double tickets will be treated as if the bet were confined to the first race. Those with daily double tickets starting with the first winner will be paid off at the price the pool figures, just as the win money is determined in ordinary betting on a single event. At the trots last season, the second race was rained out after the first had been run. A $2 refund was ordered on all tickets, but only after many first race losers had thrown away or destroyed the pasteboards . . .

Seems Mr. Weill Manages Fighters In Spare Time

Boston, May 23 (AP).—Heavyweight Rocky Marciano testified today his ring earnings are held for him by Armand (Al) Weill, Madison Square Garden matchmaker.

Marciano testified in Suffolk County superior court in a contract suit brought by Gene Caggiano of Brockton, who maintains the Brockton fighter agreed to employ him as his manager.

Caggiano contends Marciano abandoned him for Weill when he reached the "big time."

Under the rules of the commission a matchmaker is not allowed to serve as a manager.

Tennis Deadline Thursday

Thursday at 6 p. m. is the deadline for entries in the Washington tennis championships, to be held this weekend at the Edgemoor Country Club in Bethesda. You can register at the club or the Tennis Shop.

Frank Wins At 10th Hole, Jimmy, 1 Up

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 23 (AP).—Muscle-Man Frank Stranahan went through his second-round match in the British Amateur Golf Tournament today like a house afire.

Stranahan's victim was A. C. Gibson, a self-styled weekend golfer, who was helpless before the faultless play of the Toledo ace. Gibson bowed gracefully on the tenth hole 9 and 8, after a determined effort that netted him only one halved hole.

Jimmy McHale, getting his last licks before emplaning for the National Celebrities Tournament in Washington, D. C., June 3-4, also passed his second-round test.

The former pro from Overbrook, Pa., ousted S. V. Tredennick of Britain, 1 up.

McHale Has Hot Putter

McHale, former Walker Cupper, led 1 up going into the last nine, the most dramatic of the tournament.

Both men dropped 10-foot putts on the 12th and sank 12-footers on the 13th, and McHale shot a 12-footer on the 14th. McHale's long putt retrieved a bad putt on the 15th and he went 2 up. Tredennick's powerful drive helped him take the 16th but McHale won the match, 1 up. Both shot par 73s.

Willie Turnesa and Dick Chapman, most highly regarded of the other United States entrants, did not play today. Chapman, like Stranahan, had a first-round bye. He won his second round match yesterday. Turnesa won in the first round and got a free pass into the third when his opponent scratched.

With Bing Crosby gone and the weather still dismal and very cold, the crowd slumped off to almost nothing.

Most of the spectators who were on hand followed Dynamite Bill Goodloe, the little round man from Valdosta, Ga. He had all kinds of trouble, mostly with his putter, before he finally disposed of Joe Gent of England, 1 up, on the eighteenth hole.

Campbell Scores, 5 and 3

Bill Campbell, the young State representative from Huntington, W. Va., gained supporters with a convincing 5 and 3 verdict over John Graham of Scotland.

Fifty-seven-year-old Francis Ouimet of Wellesley Hills, Mass., who was a semifinalist in the tournament 27 years ago, won his second-round match from L. G. Taylor of Great Britain, 1 up.

While the American threat to the title remained powerful, the defending champion, Irishman Sam McCready, continued to breeze along. He brushed aside F. G. Dewar, Great Britain, 5 and 3.

In 13 matches today, Americans won six and lost seven. The only one of the defeats that was a surprise was the 4 and 2 whipping taken by Frank Strafaci of Garden City, N. Y., at the hands of Maj. P. T. McConnell of Britain.

Touchdown Club Outing Set for Manor June 8

The Touchdown Club will hold its seventh annual outing and golf tournament at Manor Country Club June 8, Knocky Thomas, club manager said yesterday. Golf, swimming, tennis, baseball and horseshoe pitching will highlight the day's entertainment.

Without Manager's Consent

LaMotta and Graziano Sign For Title Bout on June 28

By Jack Hand

New York, May 23 (AP).—Jake LaMotta signed today to defend his middleweight title against ex-champ Rocky Graziano, in a 15-round bout June 28 at the Polo Grounds.

Both LaMotta and Graziano signed personally, without benefit of managers, as the International Boxing Club bypassed the New York Boxing Managers Guild.

ROCKY

JAKE

The Guild and IBC are warring over terms of a new radio-television contract. Guild members are not supposed to sign for fights after May 31, expiration date of the current television agreement. The title bout will not be televised.

It turned out the fighters signed about two weeks ago for a June 14 date, but the fight was moved back two weeks to give Rocky more time to get ready. Each posted $2000 bonds at today's ceremonies.

Each fighter will get 30 percent of the gate. If Graziano wins he must give Jake a return bout within 90 days under the same 30-30 split. The IBC also would get exclusive rights to Graziano for three years if he should regain the title he lost to Tony Zale in 1948.

It will be LaMotta's first defense of the crown he won from the late Marcel Cerdan of France at Detroit last June.

While Jake signed to fight Rocky, the National Boxing Association was polling its members on a motion to deprive him of his championship. The Pennsylvania Athletic Commission wants title recognition for a June 5 Philadelphia battle between Ray Robinson and Robert Villemain.

Local Highs' Sports Fund Is Pin Money

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Passage by the House of that $28,000 athletic equipment appropriation yesterday was a moral victory for Washington's 14 high schools, but it's only a drop in the bucket compared to what schools in other cities are getting.

In Alexandria where there is just one high school, George Washington, the city has turned over more than $200,000 in the past three years for improvement of stadium and lighting facilities, so the sports program could stand on its own feet.

As a result, sports at G. W. High last year netted $27,000 through the gate, $13,000 of which was used on the same type of equipment that the D. C. highs will each have $2000 for.

In Baltimore, for the second straight year, the city is subsidizing the Interhigh sports program to the tune of $90,000.

Baltimore Coaches Have Bonus

Dr. Elman Vernier, head of the 14-school Interhigh League there estimates that about $55,000, twice as much as Washington stands to get, is used for equipment alone.

Another $25,000 goes into a bonus fund for coaches who must work after school. Football coaches get top scale of $400 per season, and basketball coaches $300. When the D. C. coaches asked for a similar arrangement last year they were told to stagger their hours so they wouldn't have to put in overtime.

The 16 Philadelphia high schools get a city appropriation of about $90,000 too, of which nearly $80,000 goes into a coaches' bonus fund, similar to Baltimore's but considerably more extravagant. That leaves each school with about $900 of city money to buy equipment.

Ordinarily, that wouldn't be enough to foot the bill, but Interhigh sports head Ben Stackowski reports that Philly is an unusual city.

"Scholastic sports, especially football and basketball are enthusastically supported by the fans here," he says, "and what we don't get from the city fathers, we more than make up in gate receipts.

"Our run-of-the-mill football games average upwards of 5000 spectators while games involving traditional rivalry will attract from 25,000 to 35,000."

Scrubs Use Castoff Gear

Alexandria, Baltimore and Philadelphia have junior varsity and lower-grade interschool team programs which make the D. C. public high program pale by comparison. And their scrubs are equipped nearly as well as the varsity, while Washington's second-string varsity players have been using two and three-year hand-me-down gear.

"Twenty-eight thousand dollars is hardly enough," one D. C. school athletic authority frankly admitted yesterday, "but remember, Congress never before would even listen to our pleas for a subsidy. We had to go easy in our request this year, and they surprised us by coming through with the full amount which we asked.

"The approximately $2000 which each school stands to get means that instead of 11 first-class equipped football players on each varsity, there will be more than 20, and that we might be able to chip in with some of the players to pay half the price of their football shoes.

"You know, they've been footing the whole bill until now."

Ball Ousts Dedrick on 22d Hole

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Medalist Bob Wolfe of Devitt easily eliminated Sid Thornton of St. Albans 5 and 4 yesterday in the first round of The Washington Post's Schoolboy Golf Tournament at Indian Spring.

The most exciting prep golf match of the year was fought to a prolonged conclusion as Bill Ball, captain of Western High's golf team, outlasted Bob Dedrick, captain of undefeated Wilson, to win 1 up in 22 holes.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Bill Wolfe (Devitt) defeated Mike Massey (Washington-Lee) 6 and 5; Paul McMahon (Gonzaga) defeated Perky Cullinane (St. Johns) 1 up; Hank Ford (St. Albans) defeated Bob Berry (Sullivan) 4 and 3; John Eisinger (Bethesda) defeated Jim Clark (St. Johns) 4 and 2; Denny Bolster (Gonzaga) defeated Henry Kerfoot (Washington-Lee) 6 and 4; Lee Edwards (Bullis) defeated Hugh Haynsworth (George Washington) 5 and 3; Bill Ball (Western) defeated Bob Dedrick (Wilson) 1 up, 22 holes; Bob Wolfe (Devitt) defeated Ed Thornton (St. Albans) 5 and 4.

In other key matches, Bill Wolfe of Devitt had an easy time defeating Mike Massey of Washington-Lee 6 and 5, and little Hank Ford of St. Albans turned giant killer to eliminate highly regarded Bob Berry of Sullivan.

Ball Rallies

Dedrick was 5 up on Ball after the first nine holes of the match and the Western star's chances looked slight, but he rallied to take the next four holes, and at the end of 18, had tied the score.

After 3 even holes Ball shot a par 4 on the 22 hole, while Dedrick topped his drive and blew two approach shots to card a six.

In other matches Paul McMahon of Gonzaga defeated Perky Cullinane, the pride of St. John's, 1 up when Perky's 25 foot putt on the 18th rimmed the cup and flipped out.

Eisinger Triumphs

John Eisinger, 1948 medalist from Bethesda, won easily from Jim Clark of St. John's 4 and 2. Denny Bolster, Middle Atlantic Junior Champion, from Gonzaga, won going away from Henry Kerfoot of Washington-Lee, 6 and 4.

Today second-flight golfers in the Schoolboy tourney will play their first-round matches at Georgetown Prep.

First-flight players rest until May 31, when they will battle for four semifinal places and a chance to play for the championship at The Washington Post's National Celebrities tournament.

Belle Haven Holds Second Team Lead

Belle Haven held onto its lead in the Women's District Golf Association Class B league with a 5-4 victory over Argyle yesterday at Kenweed.

In other matches: Prince Georges, 6½; Manor 2½; Chevy Chase, 7; Columbia, 2; Washington, 4½, Congressional, 4½; Indian 6, Army-Navy, 3.

Washington Club Takes Over Lead

Washington Golf and Country Club took over first place in the Women's District Golf Association Class C league by whipping Columbia, 8-1, yesterday at Manor.

Columbia, in the lead until yesterday, dropped to third place with 27½ points. Washington has 33½. In second place with 28½ is Manor which drubbed Indian Spring, 9-0. Other results: Belle Haven, 7½; Congressional, 1½, and Bethesda, 7½; Kenwood, 1½.

Wilson, Western Play for Golf Title

Wilson and Western High Schools will meet Friday at Army-Navy in a match to decide the Interhigh golf title. Originally scheduled for Army-Navy on June 6, the match has been moved up to enable a replay on June 6 if neeessary.

St. Stephens Wins

St. Stephen's Young Men's Club defeated the Naval Communication Station 10-3, in a Recreation League No. 2 game yesterday at West Potomac Park. Bob Payne led the victors, pitching a four-hitter and tripling and doubling to drive in four runs.

Marrero, Called 'Something You Find Under A Sombrero,' Proving Hot Tamale With Nats

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MANAGER RED ROLFE, of the Tigers, is probably thinking that Rick Ferrell, whom he hired away from the Nats as a coach, is still working for Washington. It was on Ferrell's recommendation that Detroit purchased Paul Calvert from the Nats last winter, and it was Calvert who served up those home run pitches to Eddie Yost and Gil Coan in yesterday's hectic ninth inning . . . Bob Feller's description of Conrado Marrero, the Nats' squatty Cuban pitching sensation: "Something you'd expect to see under a sombrero in Mexico, not pitching in the major leagues" . . . When a ringsider who had bet on Jimmy Cooper against Charlie Titone Monday heard Jimmy Lake announce the verdict as a draw, he said: "I feel like I've hit the numbers. I thought Titone won from here to Brooklyn." . . . And so did Heinie Miller, chairman of the District Boxing Commission, and Captain John Agnew, another commissioner, who thought Titone won at least seven of the ten rounds . . .

Chico Marrero

FOR THE PAST several months, the Turner's Arena management has refused to announce the attendance at its indoor fights, claiming the small figures would make out-of-town managers leery about bringing their fighters to Washington. Monday the Turner operators said the same thing, but finally consented to release the official attendance when newspapers threatened to call the Titone-Cooper crowd of 4600 "an estimated 800" . . . Cuban pitcher Sandalio Consuegra pitched a one-hitter for the Nats' Havana farm team the other night. Consuegra was scheduled to join the Nats last summer, but somewhere between Griffith Stadium and Havana the shipping orders must have gotten fouled up and the Nats got Enrique Gonzales instead . . . Coach Bo Rowland, of George Washington, thanked Washington's football writers at the recent GW awards banquet by saying: "You were a lot of help to us. When we looked bad, you didn't say how bad, and when we looked good, you said we were terrific" . . .

TRYING TO EXPLAIN away a 52-31 intrasquad scrimmage to people whom he fears may have gotten a false impression of his team's prowess, Coach Jim Tatum of Maryland says: "Nothing to get excited about. They scrimmaged three hours, but believe me, they aren't that good" . . . One of Tatum's disbelievers, however, was Tennessee Coach Bob Neyland, who saw the scoring marathon and came away with a new respect for the Split-T formation offense . . . Mary Lenevitch, of the Washington Jets Roller Derby team, dropped out of nursing school when offered a contract to skate for the whirling dervishes . . . A $10,000 Charlie Justice scholarship fund has been set up at North Carolina. The money was contributed by, of all people, Tar Heel alumni in Durham, N. C., home of Duke, Carolina's ancient rival . . . Leo Katkaveck, of the Caps, is about to chuck pro basketball. He's playing pro baseball in a Carolina Class C League and will probably remain in Tarheelia and play semipro basketball next winter.

Interhigh Track Meet Today Draws Record Field of 285

One of the largest fields in the 53-year history of the interhigh track and field meet will compete in the trials starting at 3:30 p.m. today at McKinley. Finals will be on Friday, same time and place.

Representing all District public high schools except Chamberlain and Bell, 285 boys will try to qualify in 13 events.

Meet cofavorites are Anacostia and Wilson, by virtue of their neck-and-neck finish in last week's metro track meet at Wilson. Anacostia, without a home track, nipped host Wilson, 39-37, with a decisive victory in the last event, a mile relay.

Besides Anacostia and Wilson, schools entered are Coolidge, Central, Roosevelt, McKinley, Western and Eastern.

Tucker, 4 Other Terp Athletes to Be Feted Tonight

Joe Tucker, quarterback on last year's football team, will be honored tonight at the senior typifying the best athlete at the University of Maryland.

Tucker, from Arlington, Va., will be presented a watch at the annual honors and awards assembly.

John H. Hunton, of Washington, will take away two awards. He was named the best athlete of the year and also the outstanding senior baseball player. Hunton plays shortstop. Andy Quattrocchi, the 130-ound knockout artist from New York, gets the award for the outstanding boxer. Robert E. Smith of Baltimore receives a trophy as the most improved fighter.

Terps Leave For Playoffs

Maryland leaves today for Grensboro, N. C., where the Terps meet Virginia Tech Thursday night in the opener of the Southern Conference baseball playoffs. Wake Forest and Clemson clash in the other playoff with the victors meeting for the title Saturday.

The Terps, who gained the conference playoffs on a pass, could make the N.C.A.A.'s tourney the same way. The first two teams in the conference playoff qualify for the N.C.A.A. If one of them happens to be Tech, which is out of step with the N.C.A.A. "sanity code," Maryland might be chosen as a replacement.

High Baseball Tourney Opens Monday Night

The first Metropolitan Washington high school baseball tournament will open next Monday even though the District Interhigh schools have declined to participate this year.

Extra teams will be invited from Northern Virginia, Prince Georges County or the Catholic High League to fill out the eight-team field. Night double-headers will be played Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Washington-Lee High in Arlington and Mount Vernon High, just outside of Alexandria.

Montgomery Gets Budget Estimate of $9,053,025

Requirements Call For Three-Cent Boost Per $100 of Assessed Values

Expense budget estimates totaling $9,053,025.47 were presented to the Montgomery County Council yesterday by County Manager Irving G. McNayr.

The budget will require a $1.93-per-$100 of assessed value tax rate for the county. This is an increase of 3 cents over the present rate.

Residents of the suburban districts, however, will net a 2-cent decrease in their tax rate, as McNayr recommended that the present 20-cent suburban district tax be reduced to 15 cents.

At the same time, the county manager transmitted a capital budget estimate totaling $10,253,700 for the same fiscal year, 1950-51. This provides $7,394,700 for school construction needs, which would include an item of $365,000 for purchase of the Bliss Electrical

School at Takoma Park for use of the Montgomery Junior College, now housed at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

$829,000 for Roads

The capital budget also provides for issuance of $829,000 for roads, streets and drainage projects; $1,230,000 for a county office building at Rockville, $800,000 for off-street parking facilities in Bethesda and $30,000 for preliminary plans for a county medical center.

Largest item in the expense budget is that for the county schools, which totals $4,269,388, an increase of $676,549 over the current schools budget. The schools board had asked an $860,000 increase, but the lower figure was reached after conferences with school board administrative officials, the board itself and the P-TA executive council.

Bus Request Cut

Other highlights in the recommendations for increases are additional staffing for general administration of the schools, textbooks, materials for instruction and increased transportation. The school board request for 23 new buses was reduced to 16.

County Manager McNayr also recommended increases of about $45,000 additional for the school health services "based upon the carefully collected data during the past year by Mrs. Eugene Meyer of The Washington Post."

Estimates for the police department were the next highest amountng to $717,274.88, an increase of $111,641 more than the present budget of $605,633.

The budget provides average increases of $100 yearly for the policemen, for eight additional policemen, bringing the strength to 142 men and for employment of 30 persons to serve as school crossing guards and relieve regular policemen of this duty.

Among a number of increases for executives of the county government suggested by the county manager, he recommended that his own salary be increased $1000, to bring his salary to $11,000 annually. The charter permits a salary of $12,000 for the county manager.

Other items of the budget include: legislative and executive departments, $93,926; courts and other state offices, $179,811; elections, $71,333.50; department of finance, $239,236.15; county attorney's office, $38,338; public safety, which includes the $717,274 for police and $42,066 for fire protection, $759,340.88; department of inspection and licenses, $54,620; public works, $1,140,802; public health, $234,601.25; miscellaneous, including an emergency fund of $50,000, total $203,162; debt service, $598,782; debt service for county schools, $928,383, and a number of smaller items.

Eastern High School Cadet Company A Wins Drill Competition Again After Twelve Years

The Washington Post

VICTORY MARCH—Cadet Capt. George E. Choulis, 18, of 1724 18th st. nw., receives the Allison Nailor medal from Vice Admiral J. W. Roper, U.S.N., at Griffith Stadium after leading Eastern High School's Company A to first place in the annual competitive drill. Sudden rain ended the awards presentation ceremony after Captain Choulis had received his medal. It was the first time in 12 years that an Eastern company had taken first place

An Eastern High School cadet company yesterday won the annual high school drill competition for the first time in 12 years.

The same Company A, which brought Eastern its last first-place drill honors in 1938, marched to victory yesterday among 18 companies from 10 District high schools.

A moment later, a downpour rained out presentation of most of the other prizes.

Lieut. Col. Georges A. Hawkins, cadet instructor at Western High School, which held an eight-year grip on the top honor until last year, has been instructor at Eastern since February of this year.

Western High School, which won first place last year, took second and third places in the drill competition.

Gold and silver medals will be presented today at Western to Joseph Peisinger, jr., captain of the second-place Company H, and to Joseph A. Forest, captain of the third-place Company K. The medals will be awarded by Joseph A. Walker, sr., Americanism officer of the D. C. Department, American Legion.

The Seventh Regiment Band of Anacostia High School played its way to victory over the Fifth Regiment Band of Roosevelt High School. Capt. Donald W. Helsel of the winning band received a medal from Adelbert W. Lee of the Board of Education. The school will receive the annual band trophy of the D. C. Department of the American Legion.

Sergt. Edward Kiess of Woodrow Wilson won distinguished noncommissioned officer's competition, based on a manual of arms drill with one noncommissioned officer from each of the 10 competing schools.

Anacostia's Sergt. Jose Saberon won second place in the noncom contest, and Sergt. Donald Roberts of McKinley took third place. The gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded by Alfred E. Steinem of the board of education.

Col. Thomas A. Farley, commander of the Cadet Brigade, was presented with a saber by Lieut. Col. Donald M. Curtis, local president of the First Division Society, in memory of the First Division dead in the two world wars.

To Western High School went an American Legion trophy for the cadet regiment having the highest general average.

Judges in the drill contests were Capt. Elmer M. Fox, First Lieuts. Raymond J. McCarrell and Byron D. Greene, jr., all of the Third Infantry, Fort McNair. Awards were announced by Lieut. Col. William E. Barkman, chief of the cadet program in white schools.

Honor Keys Are Presented by Civitan Club To 10 Top-Ranking High School Seniors

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

Who are the young lions of Washington's high schools, the nonpareils of budding brilliance, of high promise and earnest endeavor?

More important: What will become of them in the future?

Dr. Burnice H. Jarman, professor of education at George Washington University, complained last night that honor students aren't producing.

Society has a right to expect more of its most gifted members, he said, and society isn't getting it.

Ten honor students, the pick of Washington's high school seniors, heard Dr. Jarman last night at the Mayflower Hotel, where they received honor keys from the Civitan Club of Washington.

Most of them expect to become something. All hope to give society a little more.

At 17, John Barclay Forsythe already has a message for humanity. Forsythe would like men to live as individuals, not to be herded by borrowed opinions and actions.

At McKinley Tech, Forsythe had almost an A average, edited the yearbook, wrote stories. He is the son of J. A. Forsythe, a postal transportation clerk, who lives at 3620 22nd st. ne.

Nuclear physics has caught the fancy of Walter Allen Shropshire, jr., a 17-year-old straight A man at Anacostia High. He lives at 1510 23d st. se.

Until Monday, Richard Jewett was headed for West Point and a career in the Army after his graduation from Wilson High. His father is Col. Richard L. Jewett of the Army Engineers.

But Jewett learned that he may not be physically eligible for West Point, and in the last two days has been thinking vaguely of either college teaching or the ministry.

President of a youth group at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Jewett was president of the Student Council and a cadet captain at Wilson.

Jewett plans to take a liberal arts course at Middlebury College, Vt. He lives at 2704 Colston dr., Chevy Chase, Md.

Gary Marvin Newman will tell you frankly that he wants to be an executive of some big corporation. The Coolidge senior lives at 1724 Taylor st. nw.

The extracurricular energy he used as captain of the band, as assistant editor of the school paper, as a vice president of the Spanish Club, Newman intends to divert to service organizations such as the Civitan, when he reaches the cigar-smoking period.

"I'll be a scientist, I suppose, but I'm not sure just what kind," says Thomas Albert Farley of Roosevelt's class of '50. He lives at 5308 Kansas ave. nw.

Western High's Joseph Peisinger wants engineering and ROTC training at Rutgers University, where he has a scholarship.

Eventually, perhaps he will enter the Regular Army. His father is Lieut. Col. R. J. Peisinger, who lives at 3724 S. 2d st., Arlington.

Since the age of 6, Miles Davis has been nursing a scientific curiosity along.

Davis, 16, has a Harvard scholarship. Son of Watson Davis, director of Science Service, he lives at 1422 Rhode Island ave. nw. He is a Central High student.

"The pay isn't much but you meet nice people," says Frank Anthony Di Gregorio of his field—sports writing.

Di Gregorio has edited the St. John's College high school paper and yearbook, and has worked two years for the Scholastic Sports Association and the Daily News.

He is the son of a building contractor, Salvatore Di Gregorio, and lives at 1312 Floral st. nw.

Service in the FBI appears a good thing right now to John Joseph Delaney, a 17-year-old Gonzaga senior who will prep for the G-men at the Georgetown University Law School.

A member of Gonzaga's radio guild, and a formidable entry in elocution contests, Delaney is the son of Thomas J. Delaney, a safety engineer at 5350 Broad Branch rd. nw.

John Franklin Wright's extracurricular achievements at Eastern High leave little question about his future intentions. He was a second prize winner in the National Scholastic Art Contest, a member of the Art Club and photo editor of the school yearbook.

The 17-year-old senior is the son of John F. Wright, an employe of Griffith Consumers who lives at 4612 Quarles st. ne.

Hospital Unit Head Assails Funds Cut

Community Chest Accused of Boosting 'Arbitrarily' Repay Collection Estimate

The annual membership meeting of Hospital Service Agency was held here last night, with the following actions:

1. Willard C. Smith, administrator of the agency which disburses Community Chest funds for hospital care of needy patients, disclosed for the first time that an "independent" investigator had vetoed all suggestions to scrap HSA.

2. Smith, independent of his annual report, accused the Community Chest budget-makers of reducing this year's hospitalization fund by "arbitrarily" boosting his "experienced" estimate of repay collections from patients by $75,000.

3. Dr. Henry C. Macatee, a board member, recommended that HSA prod the public into giving more in Chest funds-raising drives by adopting a policy of spending its year's allotment "as the needs arise."

No Changes Urged

Giving the public first news of the survey made here early last year by Robert P. Lane, former director of the Welfare Council of New York City, Smith said in his annual report:

"After an exhaustive study, Mr. Lane could find no reasons which would justify any change in the present method of investigation and certification (of Washington's charity patients)."

Lane was hired in May, 1949, to make comparative studies between costs of the HSA set-up and the costs which would result if HSA were scrapped and its functions carried on by individual hospitals. The expense of the survey was borne jointly by Chest funds and the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area, the hospitals' own organization.

In discussing the alleged reduction in HSA's 1950 budget allotment, Smith said that repay collections for the first four months of this year "pretty well bear out my initial estimate that the 1950 repay total will be $150,000." At the present rate, he said, the repay figure for 1950 will be $154,000.

Estimate Raised, He Says

He charged, however, that Chest budget-makers upped his estimate to $225,000. The result to HSA's 1950 allotment of Chest funds, with cuts figured in on the Chest's failure to reach its goal, reduced the hospitalization fund by more than $50,000, he said.

Dr. Macatee, in urging a spend-as-the-need-arise policy, pointed out that 1950 Chest funds for hospitalization would thus be spent by September.

Edward J. Keyes, director of the Chest Federation, declared that such a policy is "untenable" with the "considered judgment" of Chest board members.

Keyes said the Chest leaders insist that the hospitalization fund be allocated in monthly portions, and that HSA keep within the monthly budgeting. This must be done, he said, even when HSA is forced to stop certifying patients when the month's allotment is spent or committed to be spent.

Five Takoma Firemen Hurt Fighting Blaze

Five Takoma Park firemen were injured last night while fighting a kerosene-fed fire that destroyed a one-story frame house.

The injured firemen are:

Pvts. Richard Rahn, 19, admitted to Washington Sanitarium for smoke inhalation; H. G. Pudleiner, 24, treated for second-degree burns of the face; Richard Toler, 18, treated for smoke inhalation; Henry Marschalk, 42, treated for a cut of the right arm, and Lieut. E. A. Reifsnyder, 31, treated for cuts of the right hand and burns.

The blaze started about 6:45 p. m. in the kitchen of a house at 9 Jefferson ave., Takoma Park. The only occupant, Mrs. A. E. Walker, about 70, was delivering a message to neighbors when it was discovered.

Takoma Park Fire Chief M. E. McBride said the blaze started in the kitchen, either from an explosion of a kerosene stove or from food that spilled over while cooking.

The fire chief said two of five 55-gallon drums of kerosene stored in the home were ruptured open by the heat of the fire, adding to the hazard of fighting it. In addition, he said, the walls of the home were lined with layers of cardboard.

The Silver Spring fire department was called in to assist. The fire was brought under control at 8:30 p. m.

Canoeists Lured to Mud Bath In Potomac by Lorelei Trio

AFTER RESCUE—John A. Cristaudo, 19, of 3813 T st. nw. and Clark F. Molster (right), 17, of 3521 R st. nw., tell Harbor Police Pvt. Lawrence Halstad of their dunking in the Potomac

This is the story—the oft-told one—of the Lorelei and the "sailors," but this time with a Washington cast and background.

Clark F. Molster, 17, and his buddy, John A. Cristaudo, 19, paddled away on a happy spring day yesterday, enjoying the Potomac breezes, thinking how foolish were those less fortunates whizzing across Memorial Bridge.

From midstream, their eyes fell on the charms of three Loreleis sunning on the Washington shore. Their heads turned, they pointed their canoe toward shore.

But the Fates were against them, for the sudden turn sent the canoe and the youths into the depths. They crawled up on the overturned "vessel" and yelled for succor.

The Loreleis were horror-stricken and, in their distress, halted motorists, telling of the plight of the fair young men.

The Harbor Police were summoned, but before their shiny launch could arrive, a muddy tug plodding along with scow of sand for the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corp. hove into view.

The youths were pulled on board and their rented canoe was perched atop the sand and so they sailed to the Smoot docks, as the Loreleis sighed for the meeting that never came.

At the Smoot docks, the waterlogged lads and canoe were transferred to the Police Boat No. 4 and sped to Jack's Canoe House, 3600 K st. nw., near Key Bridge. Another canoeist, Leonard Fay, paddled away from Jack's docks to make room for the police boat.

Then it happened, Fay's canoe flipped over and the police boat pulled away to save him and his canoe.

This accomplished, the trio thanked the police

Molster, who is unemployed, lives at 3521 R st. nw.; Cristaudo, a waiter, at 3813 T st. nw., and Fay, who is 18 and a Western High School football tackle, at 3514 Reservoir rd. nw.

County Share In Georgia Ave. Project Voted

Widening of Georgia ave., from Colesville rd. in Silver Spring to Glenmont, moved a step further yesterday when the Montgomery County Council approved the plan proposed by the State Roads Commission.

The council voted to pay $406,929 as the county's share of the widening program and also to pay half of the estimated cost of $200,000 for rights of way.

The cost of the project is estimated at $2,696,000 with the county paying $406,929 and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission paying $283,000 of the cost of storm water drainage. The county agreed to pay all except $26,000 of the remaining storm water drainage cost of $172,000.

The roads commission plan approved by the council provides for two traffic lanes of 12 feet each divided by a 10-foot raised median strip and having a 9-foot parking lane, a 5-foot concrete sidewalk with curbs and gutters on each side of the road.

County Manager Irving C. McNayr recommended that the county pay the full cost of the curb and gutters and that one-half of the cost of the sidewalks be made a front-foot benefit assessment on abutting property.

The council also authorized transfer of a 17-acre tract on Massachusetts ave. extended to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for park purposes. The county has tax title to the property as the result of tax sales in 1933, 1934 and 1935.

Two Robbers In Fake Noses Take $1040

Two armed bandits, disguised with false noses and eyeglasses, held up a Clinton (Md.) general store early yesterday and fled with more than $1000 in a stolen car.

B. K. Miller, owner of the store, said the two men missed a bag containing $1759 in cash and checks when they robbed his safe and cash register. The store is a stone's throw from the Clinton bank.

Miller's 28-year-old daughter, Peggy, was the only person in the store when the pair entered.

Miller and his son, Thomas V. Miller, were working in a warehouse in the rear of the store during the holdup, which Miller said took "about 3 minutes."

One of the bandits demanded to know where the safe was and walked directly through the store to the office. From the safe, which Peggy had left open but a few minutes before, he took a bag containing about $1000.

The other remained with Peggy, and took about $40 from the cash register.

Meanwhile, Ellsworth Thomas, who also works for Miller, appeared in a side doorway carrying a case of macaroni. The bandit near the cash register brandished his pistol, said "this is a hold-up," and ordered Thomas to stand back.

Thomas, "thought it was a gag," he told police, and lunged for the man. He was thrown to the floor, and the two men fled in a 1950 Chevrolet they had left in front of the store with engine running.

An unidentified motorist in a gas station across the street noticed the two men when they arrived and left. He noted the D. C. license plates and reported the number to Washington police, who said the car was stolen in the District Monday night.

Thomas Miller came into his father's store just after the holdup. He jumped into his car and drove all the way to Washington "at speeds up to 90 miles per hour" in pursuit of the bandits, but to no avail.

Police recalled that a similar holdup by two men in the same sort of comic disguise was staged May 15 at the Economy Finance Co., 1430 Florida ave. ne., when $2000 was stolen.

D. C. Civilian Defense Setup Provided in House Measure

Rep. John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) yesterday introduced in the House a bill to set up a District office of civilian defense.

McMillan's move was a sequal to last week's decision by the House Appropriations Committee refusing to allow $10,000 for civilian defense planning here, on the ground that there was no statutory authority for the activity.

The new bill was referred to the House District Committee of which McMillan is chairman.

Under the bill, the Commissioners would be authorized to develop a plan for "protection, relief and assistance" of property and persons here in the event of impending or actual disasters.

In carrying out its function, the office of civilian defense would be authorized to cooperate with other public and private agencies. It also would be directed to organize, equip and train volunteer civil defense units. Another of its assignments would be to plan for using District employes in and with the civil defense units.

The bill authorizes appropriations for the project.

Senate Votes Approval of East Capitol Bridge Bill

Location of Span Still Undecided; Measure Returned For House Review

The East Capitol st. bridge bill was approved by the Senate last night.

The measure cleared by unanimous consent after Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) and Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N.J.) reported that there was no objection to it.

Senate approval sent the bill back to the House for review or minor amendments. One says the bridge can be built near instead of in line with East Capitol st. Another provides Fine Arts Commission review of plans. A third authorizes a tie-in road from the proposed bridge to the future parkways from Washington to Baltimore and Annapolis.

To Confer with Beall

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), chairman of the House District Subcommittee that handled the bill, said he would confer about the Senate changes with Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), author of the bill.

Indications were that the House might be asked to accept the Senate version without sending the measure to conference.

While official agencies which first opposed the East Capitol st. bridge site in favor of one at Massachusetts ave. se. withdrew their opposition to the bill when it reached the Senate, some citizens groups and other persons continued to protest the East Capitol st. plan.

Location Undecided

The question of where to locate approaches at the west end of the bridge still is undecided.

District Highway Department planners have suggested a Y-shaped structure as one possibility with the two arms leading into B st. se., and C st. ne.

On the other hand, National Capital Park and Planning Commission withdrew its objection to the bridge bill on condition the Commissioners consider carrying the west approach south along Kingman Lake to connect with Massachusetts ave. — where the commission staff had wanted the bridge located.

Samuel R. Harrison, Deputy Director of Highways for the District, said neither the Highway Department nor the Commissioners have made up their minds yet on the approach question. When the bill becomes law, he said, the Commissioners will probably sit down with NCPPC and the National Park Service—which has jurisdiction over land near the river—to thrash it out.

Funds Allotted For Alexandria Slum Clearance

The Government yesterday set aside $159,950 for the city of Alexandria, to be used in future slum clearance and redevelopment programs.

The reservation of funds, to remain in effect for six months, was one of five approved by Raymond M. Foley, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, from money made available under the Housing Act of 1949. It was the first grant to be approved in the Greater Washington area, the agency announced.

The funds will be held in reserve for participating cities while they take steps to initiate specific slum clearance and redevelopment projects by July 1, 1951.

To qualify for the grant, the Alexandria City Council has designated the Alexandria Housing and Redevelopment Authority as its agent in the development program. The council also requested the authority to apply for a preliminary loan which will be used to cover cost of a survey to determine future slum-clearance needs.

Real Estate Tax Deadline Is Extended

Alexandria residents last night received a 30-day time extension for paying their 1949 real estate taxes.

Deadline for payment is usually May 15. But the city hasn't been able to mail out its bills yet. They should be posted this week.

So the City Council last night set this year's deadline at June 15, after which the 10 percent penalty for delinquency will go into effect.

The Council declined to intervene in the A. B. & W. Transit Co. fare increase case, resolving to leave the matter "wholly in the sound discretion" of the State Corporation Commission.

The utility's petition for a five-cent increase on intrastate and interstate lines to Washington is slated for public hearings before the SCC in Richmond May 31.

In a resolution introduced by Mayor Franklin P. Backus, and adopted without discussion, the Council expressed the feeling that the SCC would thoroughly investigate the case and would "be impartial and fair to the citizens of Alexandria as well as to the A. B. & W."

In another resolution, the council urged that a pending Congressional bill to expand the National Capital Park and Planning Commission be amended to enable the new agency to appropriate funds for parks in the nearby Virginia area. The resolution also suggested that a Virginia representative to the reorganized commission be selected from the Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission.

The Council instructed City Attorney V. Floyd Williams to prepare an ordinance, for action at its next meeting, which would outlaw the use of "B. B. guns" in the city. A motion for the ordinance, made by Councilman Marshall J. Beverly, drew a quick second from Councilman Roy Bragg, who commented: "I have a boy who is now blind in one eye as a result of a 'B. B. gun' accident about two years ago."

Rites Slated Friday For John Andrews

A high mass will be conducted Friday morning at St. Peter's Catholic Church for John Andrews, former clerk of the House of Representatives who died Monday. Burial will be in Arlington.

Acting Speaker McCormack named the following House committee to attend Andrews' funeral: Representatives Lane, Philbin, Kennedy, Donohue, Furcolo, Rogers, Wigglesworth and Bates, all of Massachusetts; Canfield of New Jersey and Graham of Pennsylvania.

About 100 Fairfax County citizens joined school officials and school board members last night in preparing a campaign for a 10.5 million dollar county school bond issue.

In a meeting held at the Oakton, Va., school, School Superintendent W. T. Woodson said that schools would be dismissed at 1:30 p. m. on the referendum day, May 21, so that teachers and older pupils could help turn out the vote.

Woodson said the county school situation was in "an awful plight now" but if the referendum doesn't pass it will be "appalling."

Woodson said schools are now terribly overcrowded, pointing to the example of the Lee Jackson School "which was built for 240 students and now has 690."

Among others speaking at the strategy meeting were: Assistant Superintendent J. H. Rice, Newell Blair, citizens manager of the campaign, and F. W. Robinson, chairman of the school board.

Other board members attending the meeting were: C. N. Cockrell, Clarence B. Jett, Alex L. Haight, John Middleton, Mrs. Almorine Crowther and Richard E. Shands.

Mass Meeting Planned On Fairfax School Bond

A mass meeting to discuss Fairfax County's proposed $10,500,000 school bond issue, will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Oak st. school, on S. Oak st. near Marshall st., Falls Church.

The Greenway Downs Citizens Association will sponsor the open meeting, at which Newell Blair, chairman of a School Emergency Committee subcommittee, and Robert Carmody, will speak. Fairfax registered voters will vote May 31 on the school bond referendum.

Mrs. Curtiss Dies; Native of District

Requiem mass for Mrs. Anna Martha Curtiss, 81, a native of Washington, will be said at 9 a. m. Thursday at St. Martin's Church. Burial will be in the St. Ignatius Church cemetery, Oxon Hill, Md.

Mrs. Curtis

Mrs. Curtiss, who lived at 12 Seaton pl. ne., died Monday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. She had been ill two months.

Mrs. Curtiss was educated at the Frederick, Md., Visitation Convent and was a member of St. Martin's Church.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Edna Dant and Mrs. Dolores Savage; three sons, Hamilton H., Samuel M. and Joseph A. Blandford; two brothers, Paul and Bernard Cain; 20 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Prayers will be held at the home at 8:30 a. m., preceding the mass.

Belles at Savings Bond Drive . . .

STUDENTS AID SALE—Joan Schaaff, 18, of 5359 Nevada ave. nw., Woodrow Wilson High student, and Dace Epermanis (right), 12-year-old Latvian, the 150,000th Displaced Person to enter the United States, join in ringing a Liberty Bell replica at the 8-school rally held yesterday at Woodrow Wilson High School to promote the Savings Bonds Independence Drive among school children of the District. More than 40 similar rallies are scheduled

House Group To Take Up Day Care Bill

House District Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) yesterday indorsed the District child daycare center program as a material factor in reducing juvenile delinquency.

He gave the indorsement in announcing that the District Committee has been called to meet at 11 a. m. Thursday on the Senate-approved bill for continuing the daycare centers.

There are now six centers. They serve between 250 and 300 children. Present law for operating them ends June 30. The Senate bill would make the program permanent.

McMillan said he feels the centers have done good work by keeping the children of working mothers off the streets and giving the yongsters supervision.

McMillan said he'd rather see a little money spent on a program that would prevent juvenile delinquency than face the need of spending more in the future to deal with juvenile delinquents.

McMillan said the committee would also be asked to act on the bill to authorize up to 23 million dollars in Federal loans for expansion of the District water system over the next decade. The loans would be repaid in the 20 years following.

Police Seek 'Charming' Home Looter

"This man is handsome."

Thus did police yesterday describe the gentleman housebreaker who ransacked piggy banks and bureau drawers in 10 Fairfax Village apartments in five hours Monday afternoon.

Not only is he handsome, according to the police lookout, but he is "very well dressed" and sports a Harvard haircut.

Women apartment dwellers told police he strolled nonchalantly through the corridors. He was described as about 30 years old, almost 6 feet tall, with light brown hair.

His loot has been figured at $56 in cash, a $200 diamond ring, and a jar of old coins of undetermined value.

Funeral Rites Held For Crash Victim

Funeral services were held at Arlington Cemetery yesterday for Comdr. Lemuel Doty Cooke, naval flier killed May 17 when his jet Banshee fighter plunged into a New Jersey swamp.

Sailors from the Third Experimental Squadron at the Atlantic City Naval Air Station, of which Commander Cooke was executive officer, bore his body from the Arlington Chapel to a black horse-drawn caisson which carried it to the grave.

Juvenile Court Tenure Status Change Sought

A possibility that circuit court tenure may be asked for the full-time juvenile court judge provided in a bill before the Montgomery County Council arose during a hearing on the measure last night.

The bill would assign the present trial magistrate handling juvenile cases to fulltime juvenile work at a salary of $10,000 per year.

Councilman J. Douglas Bradshaw expressed doubt whether the fulltime job would attract a qualified man without providing for circuit court tenure.

Trial magistrates are appointed for two-year terms. Circuit court judges are elected for 15-year terms.

A representative of the County League of Women Voters also suggested that a full time juvenile court judge ought to have extended tenure. A statement submitted by the Silver Spring branch of the American Association of University Women asked that the measure be tabled until the question of tenure be decided.

Proponents of the measure, including the advisory juvenile court committee, said provision for circuit court tenure may have to weather a lengthy trip through the State Legislature.

Quoting figures showing an increase in juvenile cases this year, they said a full time judge was needed in the meantime.

Page Hopkins, president of the Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties Engineers' Club, but appearing as an individual, opposed another bill dealing with the construction of curbs, gutters and other street improvements.

Hopkins opposed the linear front-foot method of assessing costs provided for in the measure, and asked that charges be made in accordance with the land value of the individual lots.

Wayne Birdsell, president of the Woodside Park Civic Association, asked that a bill outlining the boundaries of the Silver Spring business district be amended to conform with the master plan of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Memorial Service Friday For Martha Seaver

Memorial services will be held Friday at 8:15 p. m. at the All Souls Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw. for Miss Martha C. Seaver, 38, a State Department analyst, who died in Paris May 18.

The remains are to be cremated in Paris. Miss Seaver lived at 1824 Monroe st. nw.

Allen Brown Dies; Retired D. C. Officer

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today in Chambers Funeral Home, 3072 M st. nw., for Allen E. Brown, sr., 52, who retired from the Metropolitan Police Department in 1938 after surviving 35 accidents as a motorcycle officer. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

He died Sunday morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. Grace E. Phillips of 310 13th st. se. He was the victim of a heart attack, members of his family said.

Mr. Brown, who joined the force in 1923, was injured 35 times in accidents in eight years. Sixteen of the crashes were serious.

His back was badly injured when he was dragged by an automobile he was chasing. He then became a radio dispatcher of scout cars.

He retired after he found it virtually impossible even to work at a desk.

Senate Ladies Have Lunch at Blair House

By Marie McNair

MRS. TRUMAN, fully recovered from a cold which canceled her engagements for several days, was hostess to the Senate Ladies at luncheon yesterday at Blair House.

Annually, the Senate Ladies' Luncheon Group entertains for the First Lady in their room at the Capitol, where they sew weekly for the Red Cross. And at the end of the season the President's wife, with wives of the Cabinet, invites the Senate Ladies to a White House luncheon.

Sixteen tables, each seating six, were set up in the patio between Blair House and the adjoining Blair-Lee House. The first peonies of the season, with yellow and pink roses, pink and white snapdragons and blue and yellow iris, were used as centerpieces and throughout the drawing room suite. Mrs. Truman, with the Cabinet ladies and the wives of the Secretary of the Army, Navy and Air Force, welcomed the guests indoors.

Outside, the Marine Band orchestra played during the luncheon hour. In addition to the Senate wives, headed by Mrs. Barkley, wife of the Vice President, the group included Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and wives of former Senators living in and around Washington who have retained membership in the organization.

Luncheon was served from the Wilson and Roosevelt china. It was explained yesterday by Mrs. Helm, White House social secretary, at her press conference, that new china for the White House is purchased only when settings fall below 100 by chipping or breakage. It is necessary to maintain that number for diplomatic dinners, largest formal meals on the official calendar.

Mrs. Truman will attend the White House Aides reception at Anderson House this afternoon and on Friday will receive the Ladies Auxiliary of the Twelfth District Democratic Club of Dundalk, Md. She will leave Saturday or Sunday for Independence, Mo., for the summer, with possible short visits back in Washington during the season.

Answering a query as to why Margaret Truman has called off her singing engagements this summer, Mrs. Helm might have quoted the late Will Rogers: "All I know is what I read in the papers." She read a clipping from yesterday's edition of The Washington Post which stated that the President's daughter has been advised by Helen Traubel, her voice supervisor, to take a rest. The two engagements which were canceled were with the Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia and the Lewisohn Stadium in New York.

Final Festivity For Mrs. Mesta

MRS. PERLE MESTA, United States Minister to Luxembourg, who left last night for New York, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint, who entertained in her apartment at the Dresden. Other guests were Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. James K. Vardaman, Mrs. Max Gardner, Mrs. Fred Morrision, Mrs. John E. Peurifoy, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Edward J. McCormack, Mrs. L. D. McCormick and Mrs. John E. Horton.

Mrs. Mesta will sail June 7 to return to her post.

The Cross of "Grand Officer de la Legion dHonneur" was presented to Army Chief of Staff Gen. Joseph Lawton Collins, and to Gen. Wade Hampton Haislip, Vice Chief of Staff, at a ceremony yesterday at the French Embassy. Ambassador Henri Bonnet made the presentation. Dillons to Be Hosts At Farewell Party

THE ECUADOREAN Ambassador Augusto Dillon has resigned from his post in Washington and with Senora de Dillon expects to leave about June 1. They will say farewell to their friends at their cocktail party on Friday at the embassy.

The Ambassador, who came to Washington on his first diplomatic post on December 19, 1947, was prepared then to stay but 9 months. He's going back, after 2½ years, to resume command of his bank, the Bank of Guayaquil.

The Dillons regret leaving Washington as much as their friends are loathe to see them go. There's one consolation. They promise to be back.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 23, College Graduate, Tries to Draw Old Friend From High School Days Into Her Social Circle; His Behavior Is Spectacular

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: George is 24 and I am 23. We have been friends since high school days. I have always admired him because he has been the mainstay of his widowed mother for years, although he has two brothers, one older, one younger.

George was never an adept student. He kept company with a rather tough crowd in high school, was frequently in difficulty with school authority, and to compensate for feelings of social inferiority he adopted a bullying attitude, all of which kept him from being liked by classmates. He was hurt by his lack of popularity, but had little time (from work and school) to improve his personal habits. He scoffed at advantages enjoyed by more fortunate children but inwardly he was deeply envious.

Through a chain of circumstances too lengthy to cover here, I started seeing George again some weeks ago. He has an excellent job now, makes a good salary, and has managed to buy a home for his mother. In general he is very successful. When a bid came my way to attend an engagement party for a girl we both know, I was happy to invite George. The girl and her fiance had met in college and several of their out-of-town friends were to be present.

Later Pleads for Sympathy

GEORGE'S behavior at the party was shocking. He reminded the newly engaged girl of several dates he'd had with her. He drank far too much, made crude remarks to other girls, backslapped men he had just met, insulted a waiter at a nightclub, and made numerous cracks at colleges and college trained people. I can understand that he was manifesting inferiority feelings, but that didn't lessen my embarrassment, and by the time we left the party I was completely humiliated.

It was all I could do to be civil on the way home, and George, sensing my anger, told me many facts about his home life. He said he always felt totally lacking in social poise, because his mother was too busy providing the bare necessities to teach her children etiquette. Also he brought up college again (I am college trained) and I pointed out that it isn't necessarily a remedy for social ills; and that insofar as jobs are concerned, he is much farther ahead than most boys we know.

I do feel so sorry for him and wish I could help him. Basically he is a good boy and wants so much to be "part of the crowd." He wants me to go out with him again, but I never could put in another evening like that one; and yet I don't want to hurt an old friend. I'd like to suggest some program of study in etiquette or "public relations," but I don't know what to advise, and I don't want to appear to be a reformer or goody-goody. What do you think I should do? G. L.

Webster Has a Word for Him

DEAR G. L.: The word for George is "bounder: a vulgar person of obtrusive manners," to draw on Webster's definition. You have aristocratic refinement of feeling, and you've been mistakenly reading your own fine sensibilities into your infatuated interpretation of his frequently uncouth behavior.

You aren't drawn to him by compassionate insight into nobler aspects of his nature, as you may think, but by strong physical attraction he exerts for you. This may be mutually felt or not, but in any case it tends to cloud your critical faculties where he is concerned, and impels you to "justify" his crudities—by dressing them in sentimental whitewash—when you cannot ignore their obtrusive existence.

Your yen to help him is not big hearted. Your emotions are hungrily involved. You'd lik to render him socially acceptable to your kind of people, at least superficially, so that you might bring him to the fore as a suitor or love-object. But his spectacular coarseness at the party, for which there was no excuse—as he had your sponsorship and the tentative acceptance of your friends—takes him out of the category of suffering soul and labels him a natural roughneck. And I don't mean a diamond in the rough, which is a character of a different and higher order, geared to noble civility without prior coaching.

Give up the idea of trying to popularize George with your crowd. Take a tip from experience (a costly teacher) and don't date him again. It is the only sure way to avoid the risk of drifting into a permanent alliance, which I think would entail epic humiliation for you. Sob-sister solicitude won't uplift George. Individuals attain only those goals or reforms they set for themselves. And if he were susceptibly interested in your genteel values he would be taking notes from your example, instead of shaming you with his boorish horseplay in polite society. M. H.

Like the Recipe for Rabbit Stew, The Secret of Cooking Artichokes Is, First Off, Get Your Artichoke

Can you tell me how to cook an artichoke correctly? And how do you suggest serving it? V. J., Hyattsville, Md.

In buying your artichokes, select a firm medium-sized one. If they are too large or the outer leaves are spiny, they will be tough.

Cut off the stem and top. Remove the very hard outer leaves. Plunge artichoke, stem-end down, into rapidly boiling salted water and boil 25 to 30 minutes or until outer leaves can be easily detached. Drain well. Turn upside down and press out the water. Serve hot with Hollandaise sauce. You'll find a recipe for it in almost any cookbook.

DEAR ANNE:

In the Washington Post of March 4, 1948, a picture of unit furniture, storage-wall type, is featured. Please tell me where this may be seen.

Mrs. S. A. A., Kensington.

This furniture can be obtained through a local firm which has some samples of it on the floor of its store. For further information, call Hobart. 4350.

DEAR ANNE:

Where may I purchase sheets and spreads for "a youth bed"? If they don't come ready-made, can I get chenille by the yard to make a spread?

Doris J. Butcher,
11 S st. nw., Washington.

I have been unable to find bed sheets in local stores for the youth beds designed for children, and am told by those in the linen departments that the nearest thing they have is cot sheets, measuring 54 by 99 inches.

Youth bed spreads have also proved elusive, as well as chenille sold by the yard. Have you considered buying a larger spread, cutting it down, and using the leftover to curtain a small window or something of the sort?

DEAR ANNE:

In regard to W. K. L.'s question about something to take the place of sterilizing baby bottles by boiling, there is now an effervescent tablet made by the Infancy Products Co., Norwich, Conn. When dissolved in either hot or cold water it will completely sterilize baby bottles and nipples in 8 minutes. This product is commended by Parents, though it may not be available in local drug stores yet.

Mrs. J. A. G., Camp Lejeune, N. C.

A check with local drug wholesalers reveals that, while this product is not yet on sale here, a local agent has been named. The wholesale company expects a shipment in about 10 days, which means you should be able to find it in some of the local drug stores within a few weeks.

DEAR ANNE:

Some suggestions for making formulamaking and sterilizing easy, in answer to W. K. L.'s recent letter:

See pages 84-85 of Dr. Benjamin Spock's "Baby and Child Care" (Pocketbook) to see if you are sterilizing more things than necessary.

Use equipment economically, measuring and mixing with same spoon and with measuring pitcher. Place nipples, caps, and disks in jar or jars so you can lift them all out at once. Leave utensil handles outside sterilizer to keep them cool enough to handle.

Set water on to boil in saucepan (for formula and drinking water) and in sterilizer before you wash equipment. The water left in saucepan after you use all you need makes baby's drinking water.

Relax while utensils are sterilizing! This is a good time to read The Washington Post. Anne E., Riverdale, Md.

She Married Archaeology

Makes No Bones About Her Job

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

MRS. MATTHEW STIRLING, once her husband's secretary, is now his right hand man on archaeological expeditions. She's shown helping sort out samples of primitive pottery unearthed in their recent junket to Panama. Mr. Stirling is chief of the Smithsonian Institution's Bureau of American Ethnology

By Norma Lanum

MARION STIRLING didn't know a thing about archaeology until she married her boss 17 years back.

She was secretary then to Matthew W. Stirling, chief of the Smithsonian Institution's Bureau of American Ethnology. Ever since the wedding day, she's been his right hand man on yearly archaeological expeditions.

Even her honeymoon trip to Florida turned out to be a grave-digging project. In succeeding years the Stirlings dug up graves all through the State, then moved to Mexico. They devoted their last two years to ancient Panama burial sites.

There's nothing morbid about their tastes, however. Graves simply yield the most revealing source material for studying early cultures, since many peoples buried jewelry and household articles with their dead.

Staying at Home

This year the Stirlings are staying at home. "You have to take some time to compile all the data and do some studying," explains the tall slender lady explorer. And besides she's writing a book and doing some lecturing.

At the Washington Club yesterday Mrs. Stirling kept members sitting on the edge of their chairs with her colored movies about the jungles of ancient Panama.

Her prime duty on the trips, Mrs. Stirling explains, is as curator of the pottery and jewelry—and skeletons—found in the excavations. She cleans the pieces, tags them saying where they were found, how deep beneath the ground, etc., and then she crates and mails them to either the Panama City Musuem or to the Smithsonian Institution.

Hundreds of Eye Teeth

In one grave the excavators found hundreds of eye teeth which, according to Mrs. Stirling, showed traces of Mongolian racial characteristics indicative that Asiatics may have immigrated to America centuries ago. One part of the film pictures her threading all these biters on a string. "Just another job for an explorer's wife," she comments blandly.

Marion Stirling also is invaluable to the expeditions merely because she's a woman, an understanding woman. In fact, a great deal of her forthcoming book describes her experiences as an "understanding woman."

Native guides on the junkets would always confide in her about marital and financial troubles. "And they always had plenty of them," she laughs. But Mrs. Stirling learned that if she was "simpatico" to the peoples whose land they were digging up, the job was much easier.

80th Congress Club Meets

PARRY-PHRASING

Lone Star's Lone GOP Member Awaits His Mrs.

By Ellen Buell Parry

CAPITOL HILL gained a new Congressman between seasons last week, and Capital society gained a new and attractive young matron.

However, Mrs. Ben H. Guill had a few things to put in order back home in Pampa, Tex., before taking up her role as a Representative's wife. So, after a flying trip to the Capital to see her husband sworn in, Marjorie Guill hurried on home. She'll be back in about three weeks, with Hugh, age 19 months, and the whole family will be together until the session ends.

MRS. GUILL

The new Congressman's wife is tall, blonde, blue-eyed, thirtyish. She and her husband grew up together in Pampa, where her father, a real estate broker, settled after migrating from England. The new Representative elected to fill out the term of former Representative Eugene Worley who moved to the Court of Customs Appeals, is incidentally the first Republican from the Lone Star State in 24 years.

The Edmund Montgomerys, who won the historic estate Collingwood on the Potomac near Mount Vernon, have two important events coming up in the next month.

Memorial Day evening they will open the new summer theater they have built on the estate. The first production will be Preston Sturges' comedy, "Strictly Dishonorable," with Movie Star Gloria Jean as the leading lady. Before the opening, the Montgomerys are giving a small dinner party at Collingwood Tea House.

On June 17, the family will go to Pittsburgh to attend the wedding of John Sellers Yates, son of Mrs. Montgomery and the late Mark Reid Yates, to Miss Marguerite Kay Tabor, daughter of Mrs. Edward O. Tabor and the late Mr. Tabor of Pittsburgh.

Conversation seldom lags for a moment at a "ladies luncheon"; but when 12-year-old Rita Preisman started playing the piano, following a luncheon Mrs. Eugene Reitzke gave last week at her beautiful country place near McLean, 40 guests sat at rapt attention in admiration of this child's brilliant performance.

Rita, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Preisman of Silver Spring, started taking lessons when she was 5. Last year she gave a concert at Barker Hall.

"I ADORE having my sisters visit me," said Mrs. Windsor-Lewis, wife of British Military Attache Col. James Windsor-Lewis, as she introduced me to Miss Felicity Harrison, who has come from Hertfordshire, England, to visit the Windsor-Lewises at Lower Ranleigh, their home near Chain Bridge.

Another Miss Harrison, Diana, was here for two months earlier this year. She was so enthusiastic about her trip to America that Felicity decided to come.

The sisters, hostess and guest, spent several days in New York last week.

Dr., Senora de Mora Are Dinner Hosts

Dr. Jose Mora, Uruguay Ambassador to the Organization of American States, and Senora de Mora, were hosts at dinner last evening at their home on Woodland dr. in honor of Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Edward G. Miller, jr.

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina and the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon were in the group of guests. Others were the Costa Rican Ambassador and Senora de Echandi Jimenez; the Cuban Ambassador Luis Machado and his daughter, Senorita Elena Machado, and Willard Barber of the State Department and Mrs. Barber.

Dr. and Senora de Mora will spend the weekend in New York to meet the Uruguay Ambassador, Dr. Alberto Dominquez-Campora, who is returning from a visit to Uruguay.

Geico Votes One-for-Six Stock Melon

By S. Oliver Goodman

Directors of Government Employees Insurance Co. yesterday declared a stock dividend of 16 2/3 percent on capital stock, as well as the semi-annual dividend of 50 cents a share.

Goodwin

President Leo Goodwin said the stock melon will be paid July 1 on the basis of one new share for every six shares held on June 15. The cash dividend is payable July 31 to stock of record July 15.

This is the third consecutive year that GEICO has voted a stock dividend, Goodwin noted. In 1949 a 20 percent stock melon was sliced and in 1948 a stock dividend of 66 2/3 percent was paid after a 25-for-1 stock splitup.

To effect the latest 16 2/3 percent stock dividend, $100,000 will be transferred from surplus to capital. This will increase capital to $700,000, thereby creating 25,000 more shares. After July 1, there will be 175,000 shares outstanding and surplus will be $2,482,420.

The good news for shareholders was coincidental with the official opening yesterday of GEICO's new six-story home office at 14th and L sts. nw. An estimated 1000 persons attended the reception from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m., after which officers and employes and their families celebrated.

DEADLINE NEAR: Holders of Potomac Electric Power Co. common stock have until 3 p. m. Thursday to exercise their "rights" to buy shares of new stock at $14.50 each. As the warrants have a cash value until the deadline, stockholders are cautioned to use them or sell them. Any local broker will be glad to handle the deal either way.

ODD LOTS: Pennsylvania Co. and Pennsylvania Railroad Co. yesterday asked ICC authority for each to issue 60 million dollars of new bonds . . . Westinghouse Electric Corp. has filed suits in New York courts, charging nine appliance dealers with selling below fair trade prices . . . Philip Morris & Co. Ltd., Inc., is offering its common stockholders the right to subscribe to 130,610 shares of preferred stock at $100.75 a share and to 333,077 additional shares of common stock at $48 a share . . . Dun & Bradstreet report business failures in week ended May 18 declined to 199 from 217 in previous week.

ELEVATION: Sidney S. Alderman has been elected vice president and general counsel of the Southern Railway System, with headquarters in Washington. Alderman formerly served as the railroad's general solicitor at Washington from 1930 until 1947, when he was promoted to general counsel.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: C. B. Vernooy, now comptroller of the Geneva Steel Co., will become assistant comptroller of United States Steel Corp., effectively July 1 . . . A. King McCord has been elected president of the Oliver Corp., succeeding Alva W. Phelps who was made board chairman . . . Joe W. Pitts of Alexandria, Va., has been elected president of the Southern Supply and Machinery Distributors Association . . . John J. Weber has been named drug sales manager of McKesson & Robbins, Inc.

NEW COMMITTEE: Formation of the NAB Business Trends Committee, its membership composed of leading American figures in business, was announced yesterday by Justin Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters. The NAB Committee will meet in New York City for the first time July 11. The purpose is "to bring together at regular intervals the best minds; in American industry to chart out, through discussion and interchange of ideas, the status of the American economy and to supply NAB members with basic information concerning the business and economic trends."

Dealer Gets 5 Years In $51,035 Fraud

Chicago, May 23 (AP).—A Lasalle st. securities dealer was sent to prison today for cheating 14 of his customers out of $51,035.

Otto F. Herald, 56, former owner of the Fiscal Service Corp., 134 south Lasalle st., was sentenced to five years by Federal Judge Elwyn R. Shaw.

Herald declined to admit or contest charges of violating the Securities and Exchange Act and of using the mails to defraud.

Prosecutor Robert P. Downing said the customers borrowed money from him to buy securities, then turned the paper over to him as collateral for the loans. Herald then sold the securities without notifying the owners.

Business Outlook

Big Profits by Another Name—Would They Smell Sweeter?

By J. A. Livingston

DON KNOWLTON is embarrassed. Not for himself, but for his clients. He's head of the public relations firm of Hill & Knowlton of Cleveland, and his clients are mostly corporations, often successful corporations. Knowlton's embarrassed by their riches, by their profits.

Corporations today are sitting ducks for union leaders wanting higher wages, or politicians wanting Washington headlines. Knowlton wants to remove the curse of high profits. As a first step he'd get rid of the word "profits." He doesn't go along with Shakespeare that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

Livingston

Knowlton feels profits are misrepresented and overemphasized. He puts the blame largely on accountants, also on financial editors. Recently, he told the New York Society of Security Analysts:

"As financial reporting spread more widely, and in particular as financial editors gave more space to corporate earnings, financial editors naturally picked up accounting terminology . . . So for many years the public in this country was fed a diet of words, the meaning of which they did not correctly understand—and what is far more serious, words which gave them a concept of profits completely at variance with the actual facts."

Knowlton argues that the average person erroneously thinks of profits as cash money a corporation can use as it sees fit. He'd get rid of the word and fit income accounts to a cash concept. Yet that raises a question: If you change the word profit, or change the system of accounts, will you get rid of the misunderstanding? Or will people simply attach the old misunderstanding to the new word? Knowlton's method introduces its own false assumption—that cash is the beginning and end of business just because many people think so.

KNOWLTON'S efforts to put profits in a soft light gets no handclap from accountants. Carman G. Blough, research director of the American Institute of Accountants, which is to accountancy what the American Medical Association is to physicians or the American Economic Association is to economists, observes:

"Trying to minimize profits by juggling figures or calling income by a different name is neither good accounting nor good public relations. Mr. Knowlton's objective of making financial statements easier to understand is commendable, but his actual proposals would seriously mislead the public and leave business open to charges of dishonest reporting."

The accountant tries to keep track of all income and outgo, regardless of whether it's cash. Thus, as a machine wears out, the accountant charges it against the cost of doing business. Profit to the accountant is the difference between what is taken in from the sales of goods and services and what are called the costs of doing business. Such costs include payroll, supplies, charge-offs for wear and tear, interest and taxes.

The difference—the leftover—represents the amount which accrues to the owners. That leftover can take the form of new plant, new machinery, additional inventories; it needn't be cash. It's the incentive for keeping money in a business or putting up more money.

THE ACCOUNTANT tries to measure the economic progress of a business. But sometimes he doesn't quite make it. Today machinery costs two to three times what it did in 1939. Depreciation rates, based on 1939 costs, are insufficient to buy new machinery. As a consequence, corporation costs are understated and profits are overstated in "real" terms.

Accountants accept this criticism. Oftentimes they recommend that companies set up special reserves when depreciation seems inadequate. But accountants are unwilling to change terminology or methods. And for good reason. Investors, stockholders, Government officials and businessmen rely on consistency in corporation reports. If alterations in bookkeeping are made every time prices go up or down, every time machinery or inventory fluctuates in value, you'd have chaos in financial reporting.

Raising depreciation charges might tend to lower profits today when prices are high. But consider the effect in bad times when prices are low and machinery can be bought more cheaply. Then depreciation charges would go down and profits would go up. That would occur most likely in the middle of a depression. What would Mr. Knowlton do then, as a public relations man? His corporations would be showing inflated profits just when employment was low and business was bad! He'd be foiled by his own device.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 23 (AP).—Grains turned in a good account of themselves today after a slow start at the Board of Trade. The early trading was slow and without much pattern. When mill buying and some export business developed in wheat, the whole market took on a firm tone, except lard.

Both chain and small bakeries were in the market for flour, which induced mill buying. Overnight sales of around 900,000 bushels of wheat to Peru combined with domestic businesses to advance wheat. Cash corn business was reflected in the futures pit. When the cash basis was established at 5½ cents over the July future, corn offerings dried up.

At the close, wheat was ⅛ to 1¾ higher, corn was ⅞ to 3¼ higher, oats were ⅝ to 1⅞ higher, soybeans were ¾ to 4½ higher, rye was ¾ to 1½ higher, and lard was unchanged to 5 cents a hundredweight lower.

New York Cotton

New York, May 23 (AP).—Cotton futures closed firm today at gains of 50 cents to $1 a bale. Trading was slow until late in the session when persistent trade buying of nearby July futures stimulated short covering in the balance of the market. The July 1950 contract established a new season's high at 33.19 cents a pound.

Capital Transit Asks Boost To 15 Cts. in Virginia Fare

Capital Transit Co. yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to boost its share of the fare on the Capital Transit-A. B. & W. route from Washington to the Pentagon and other nearby military installations to 15 cents.

The route affected is between District points and Pentagon, Navy Annex and National Airport.

Since A. B. & W. has also asked for a 15-cent share, the one-way fare could be boosted to 30 cents, should the ICC grant both requests.

The fare now is 16 cents. Capital Transit receives 7 cents; the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Bus Co., 9 cents.

Capital Transit representatives said the company made the request in an answer to A. B. & W.'s petition filed May 12 with the ICC.

15 Cents Held Necessary

Capital Transit's filing cited the fact that the staff of the District's Public Utilities Commission has "recognized a 15-cent cash fare as reasonable within the District."

Therefore, Capital Transit's representative explained, the company feels 15 cents is necessary to render the service on the joint route with the A. B. & W. line.

If the A. B. & W. request alone were granted, the "Pentagon fare" would be 22 cents—with A. B. & W. receiving 15 cents, and the Capital Transit share remaining at seven cents. If Capital Transit's request alone were granted the one-way fare would be 24 cents.

In hearings before the District PUC, Capital Transit has requested a 15-cent cash fare within the District with tokens at six for 80 cents and no weekly pass. Its present fare is 13 cents cash; three tokens for 35 cents, and a weekly pass for $1.75.

Flat Increase Requested

A. B. & W. has already asked the ICC and the Virginia State Corporation Commission to grant it a flat 5-cent increase in all regular fares. In addition it has asked the ICC to abolish a special 10-cent rate on A. B. & W. only between the District pickup point at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. and the Government installations in Virginia.

A. B. & W.'s original request to the ICC was to abolish the joint ticket fare with Capital Transit. The 5-cent increase asked by the company would then be superimposed on the present special 10-cent pickup-point to Virginia rate—a total of 15 cents.

To the Virginia State Corporation Commission, A. B. & W. has proposed a new one-zone intra-State fare in the Alexandria and Arlington areas that would consist of a 15-cent cash fare, or tokens at four for 50 cents (12½ cents each).

Four Youths Held on Charge Of Assault

Four youths, including two University of Maryland students, were held for the grand jury yesterday, charged with robbing and assaulting a man they offered to drive home.

Charles William Fuller, 21, 4315 Harrison st. nw., and John Irvin Sacks, 21, 1479 Harvard st. nw., both University of Maryland freshman, and James Joseph Reap, 24, 4311 4th st. nw., were held under $1000 bond, charged with robbing John L. Warren, 2016 37th st. se.

Gus William Andrakakos, 19, 4434 Kansas ave. nw., was charged with robbery and assault, and held under $2000 bond.

Warren testified in Municipal Court yesterday that he looked for a cab driver near 11th and Monroe sts. nw., late Friday night to drive his car home. He said he had had two martinis and one beer and did not want to drive himself.

The four youths offered to take him home, he said, but detoured to the old city dump at 28th and M sts. ne., where he was beaten and robbed of $9.81, an auto jack and some car polishing equipment.

Andrakos and Reap drove his car, Warren testified, while the college students followed in another car, the rear license plate of which was covered by a white cloth, he said. Andrakakos hit him twice, he asserted.

Captain Best Promoted to Battalion Chief

District Commissioners yesterday promoted Fire Department Capt. Joel R. Best to rank of battalion chief, effective June 1, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Nelson E. Bowen.

Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew said Best would command the Third Battalion, where he has acted as chief for two months.

Best, 59, has been a fireman 36 years and is the department's senior captain. Before his transfer to the Third Battalion he had commanded No. 2 Engine Co. He has been designated an acting battalion chief since 1946.

The promotion will boost Best's salary from $5300 to $6598 a year.

Science Looks at Gambling Rackets

Lotteries Termed a Form of Gambling

The American Academy of Political and Social Science has collected from hundreds of sources facts about gambling that have escaped the layman. Its findings are presented by The Washington Post in a series of six articles of which this is the third.

Today's article discusses lotteries, past and present, and takes a look into the future. It is taken from the current issue of the Annals of the American Academy.

By Ernest E. Blanche

CHAPTER THREE

The $64 question making the rounds these days is: Should the United States establish a legalized national lottery?

Most people are inclined to answer "yes" or "no" without giving the matter much serious consideration. But the question is not one that can be passed off lightly. Indeed, there are so many ramifications that even those who are in favor of national lotteries urge caution in their establishment.

There is reason to be cautious, for all lotteries are a form of gambling, scaled to meet the pocketbooks and desires of the gambling public.

Strictly speaking, a lottery is any event in which participants pay money to compete for prizes which are awarded on the basis of chance.

Under the guise of charity or religion, many civic and social organizations now conduct forms of lotteries for the purpose of raising money. Many municipalities and counties have legal provisions for such games.

Bingo, bank night, raffles, drawings and guessing contests are established gambling games that are conducted in many churches, schools, civic clubs and business associations.

Throughout these United States, reaction to the lottery fluctuates between two extremes. The one is a strict interpretation of the lottery as a gambling device and therefore no legal sanction. The other is the wide-open conduct of lotteries every few minutes in Nevada, where all forms of gambling have been legalized.

Americans were exposed to lotteries from the very beginning. The Virginia Company replenished its treasury with funds from a lottery in 1612.

At one time or another, all 13 colonies established and operated lotteries. But as early as 1682 the Quakers of Pennsylvania passed an act against lotteries, cards, dice, and "such like enticing, vain and evil sports and games."

During the Revolutionary War the Continental Congress authorized a national lottery to raise 10 million dollars, but this lottery was unsuccessful and was discreetly called off.

By the 1800's the lottery had achieved tremendous popularity, and during the single year of 1832 approximately 420 lotteries were drawn in eight States, according to the Boston Mercantile Journal. The total sum paid for tickets in these lotteries was 66 million dollars—five times the expenses of the Federal Government for that year.

The financial drain on the Nation, spurious lotteries, and the increase in crime and poverty brought about the establishment of many societies for the suppression of lotteries.

In 1833 Pennsylvania and Massachusetts passed acts prohibiting lotteries. New York followed in 1834 and by 1840 many other States had joined the reform.

The Southern States continued to tolerate lotteries on a small scale, and after the Civil War they endeavored to use them as a means of raising funds. But public indignation stamped them out, the last embers dying in Louisiana where the Louisiana State Lottery gave up its fight in 1890.

Congressional action in 1890, forbidding the distribution of lottery material and tickets through the mails, sounded the death knell of the lottery, while the 1895 action forbidding interstate transportation of tickets was the coup de grace.

Legal lotteries in this country, except those in Nevada, are relatively minor events for merchandise, such as bingo, or drawings for automobiles, television sets, or similar prizes.

Such lotteries are subject to approval of local authorities under city ordinances usually set up to permit fund-raising for worthy purposes.

All other types of lotteries—football pools, baseball pools, numbers game, policy game, sweepstakes, chain letters, pyramid clubs and a myriad of variations—are prohibited by law. But the operators who conduct these gambling games surreptitiously distribute their tickets through "runners" with shady pasts and questionable futures.

Local drawings for merchandise are as pernicious as the other gambling games, for ticket sellers offer "great inducements"—25 cents for one ticket or five tickets for a dollar.

Players buy many tickets in the hope of winning, with the result that $10,000 worth of tickets may be sold for prizes worth in total only $2000.

What will tomorrow's lotteries be like? Well, just look at some of the schemes that have been offered by Congressmen and other reputable citizens who advocate the national lottery.

The national lottery bill to raise funds for the Veterans' Administration, introduced by Representative Kenney (D., N.J.) came up for extensive hearings in 1934, but the Ways and Means Committee failed to act on it.

Speaker Rainey summarized the opposition when he said, "The country has not yet been reduced to the extreme of accepting such a revenue measure."

Immediately after Pearl Harbor the flow of lottery bills increased. In December, 1941, Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), proposed that the Government sell "Remember Pearl Harbor Savings Certificates" in $1 denominations for $1.10, the extra 10 cents representing the price of an attached numbered coupon for a monthly drawing of prizes in defense savings bonds. The certificates themselves would be redeemable at any time for $1 or could be used to purchase savings bonds.

Representative Knutson (R., Minn.) in February, 1942, introduced a measure which would be used to finance an increase in old-age pensions to $60 a month, the plan being to have postoffices sell tickets at $2 each (half-tickets $1) for a monthly drawing.

In 1946 Representative Sabath (D., Ill.) dusted off his national lottery plan, revised the myth about billions of dollars for the Government in the lottery business, and suggested that winners be paid in war bonds rather than cash.

The Associated Press quoted him as saying, "People have a lot of money. They can't spend it because many of the things they want aren't available, and if we can siphon some of it off into the Treasury in an honest gambling proposition, nobody will suffer."

While the Treasury Department has not commented on war-bond lotteries by the Federal Government, it has disapproved the use of war bonds as prizes in private lotteries, punchboard, pinball, and "other games of chance where an element of personal profit is involved."

The entire cycle of the ups and downs of the lottery has been traversed, and many people are ready for another ride.

The worthy purposes which won support for the lotteries hundreds of years ago are being cited in this new American drive for legalized gambling.

Morally and legally wrong and outlawed, lotteries do more than mulct and the rich and poor alike. They change the very pattern of living, distort the sense of values, and incubate the eggs of crime.

The financial returns, insignificant in proportion to the national income or the Federal expend-itures, are like the 30 pieces of silver paid for the betrayal.

An Admirer of Dave

Garroway's Methods Intrigue Fred Allen

By C. E. Butterfield

NEW YORK (AP).—Fred Allen, radio's missing comedian except for occasional guestings, still has not made up his mind about next season. The vacation he started a year ago, partly to look into television, continues in effect.

When he does come back, Fred has indicated he hopes to be all primed should he take a television plunge. He expects to make an early visit to Chicago, where the Dave Garroway NBC shows, both radio and TV, hold forth. He wants to get some of the inside about TV as a possible help to his own future. The visit could give him opportunity to make his own TV debut, for Garroway has a habit of turning callers into unexpected camera guests.

Fred says he is quite an admirer of Garroway and his methods. The two were together for several conferences when Garroway visited New York last week.

TWO more summer shows for NBC have been made ready. One is the Penny Singleton (she's the former Blondie) series, to take over from Duffy's Tavern on June 6. It's "Penelope's Progress," story of a young widow with two daughters running her late husband's business.

The other will be Judy Holladay from Broadway in the comedy drama, "Miss Burke," to replace American Album of Familiar Music in July. Both are network fills for sponsor shows.

Instead of going off, as had been indicated, Man on the Farm will continue on MBS on Saturdays as a sustainer but cut down to 30 minutes at noon.

COMPETITION of television for nighttime attention may not be the reason altogether, but daytime radio has been on the upgrade almost steadily since the postwar splurge of TV got under way.

A lot of it is credited to the transfer of night shows and talent to the dawn-to-dusk hours. Sponsors have been back of most of the moves, which are predicated on the theory that daytime television will not be able to compete the way it does at night. Also, there's the thought that radio doesn't need lookers. The housewife can keep right on with her housework as she listens.

While the shift hasn't been a stampede, enough of it has taken place to indicate at least it has become a trend. Possibly not all of the changes are traceable to the TV situation and could be a desire to tap different audiences. Nonetheless, the visual influence is there in the background.

AMONG the more prominent evening shows now exclusively daytime are Double or Nothing and Quick as a Flash, both in the quiz category. Another is Strike It Rich, born as a summer night replacement and now daytime on a regular basis. Further examples are available in the Quiz Kids with a separate night TV show and the daytime version of Grand Ole Opry, a recent addition.

Kraft, which presented such stars as Bing Crosby, Al Jolson and others as Thursday night regulars for many years, dropped that time to put on a couple of morning programs instead last winter but retained its Wednesday night television drama, which recently celebrated its third anniversary.

As to talent, Walter O'Keefe and Garry Moore have gone over entirely to the day, although Garry is now temporarily off CBS. Others who have added afternoon or morning shows are Art Linkletter and Dave Garroway. Fred Waring's night appearances are strictly TV as he maintains a Saturday morning-only radio schedule. Bing Crosby also has taken on a daytimer, recorded like his night show.

The over-all effect has been to benefit daytime listeners, giving them entertainment of a caliber once available only at night.

Slightly Ancient Signs Still Good for a Laugh

Stephen Rose of 1403 Newton st. ne. reports that a sign in the Central Valet, 1405 H st. nw., proclaims:

"We doctor shoes. We attend to their dyeing, and save their soles."

Harry Traub says that a Maryland appliance dealer displays a sign which reads:

"Don't kill your wife; let our washing machines do the dirty work."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three part-Persian kittens, 5 weeks old; the landlord is adamant." (Wisconsin 6991.)

"Large carton of magazines; complete sets in most cases." (Sligo 1332.)

"Four cute little kittens." (Tuckerman 0215 between 7 and 8 o'clock.)

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Emmett Vowell of 1908 Biltmore st. nw. has some sound advice for the ladies: "If you don't get your way with a man the first time, cry, cry again."

OUT OF PRACTICE

Eleven soldiers stationed in Alaska became very ill after drinking an alcohol mixture used to start airplanes in cold weather. I guess we're not as hardy a Nation as we were during prohibition.

RED HERRING?

The British think they know what those Soviet "fishing" boats are fishing for—and it ain't fish.

POETRY DAY

I have just made an amazing discovery. If a columnist finds 10 good poems a day in his mail and prints only one, he soon accumulates a vast surplus of poems.

Let's catch up a bit by turning the remainder of today's space over to the rhymsters:

TO MR. ACHESON

Diplomacy is very fine
And likely to succeed
If diplomats can draw a line
Ere armies draw a bead.
Mary Ellen

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT

What is love? Must it grow . . . Like a flower, a rose for show? . . . Should it bloom slowly . . . Or just grow up and be? . . . Is it less real when . . . It quickly blooms and then . . . Reaches out toward the sun as living things have ever done?
Mary N. Lazarus

MONEY TREE

Ah, yes, money's the root of all strife,
And you dig for this root all your life.
But if ever the root
Should grow up to bear fruit
It would quickly be plucked by your wife.
Ellry Mane

THUMBNAIL SKETCH

My kitty is a window-cat, a tree-cat . . . A come-now-everybody-look-at-me-cat . . . A feed-me, pet-me, let-me-still-be-free-cat . . . And also—incidentally—a he cat.
Vinnie Gurry

GRRRR!

A pox on certain of those men . . . Who, coming home at night . . . Do fail to note the fresh-scrubbed floors . . . And windows shining bright . . . But oh, those caustic, ringing tones . . . When, eagle-eyed they spot . . . The one too-cluttered shelf or drawer . . . Their poor tired wives forgot.
Sarah E. Hailey
800 N. Wayne st.
Arlington, Va.

PET PEEVE

The rudest driver that I see
Is he who leaves his lane
And crosses smack in front of me
To splatter me with rain.
Elizabeth H. Skidmore
601 Poplar dr.
Falls Church, Va.

TING-A-LING

My little clock, whose timely warning . . . Woke me early every morning . . . Tick-tocks now with slowing wheezes . . . And just alarms me when it pleases.
Plainly I must make my mind up . . . It's headin' for the last wind-up.
Louise A. Baldwin

DESCRIPTION OF A HORSE-PLAYER

Has pockets full of papers
And patches on his pants.

Legislator Chides Colleagues

By Drew Pearson

Tall, scholarly Representative J. M. (Judge) Combs of Texas seldom opens his mouth unless he has something to say. He had plenty to say behind closed doors the other day when the Ways and Means Committee voted a big reduction in the capital-gains tax on upper-bracket taxpayers — and it wasn't music to his colleagues' ears.

COMBS

Combs bluntly charged the committee with handing out millions in tax relief to Wall Street stock traders and others who make "quick profits on turnover transactions."

"You are unfairly discriminating against more than 60 million low and moderate taxpayers who derive their income from salaries, wages and ordinary business income," the Texan chided his colleagues. "It has always been my understanding that taxes should be easiest on those least able to bear them, but you are handing out a lot of relief here to people who can best afford taxes."

Combs angrily pointed out that the people the committee had "put on relief" by reducing the capital-gains tax from 25 to 16 percent were individuals with annual incomes of $15,000 or more and married couples with joint incomes of $30,000 or more.

Representative Walter Lunch (D., N. Y.) was mowed down by the Texan when he argued that the capital-gains cut would stimulate investments, and thus business.

"Don't kid yourself that this will stimulate business and encourage sound investment," lashed back Combs. "All it will do is foster a quicker tournover of securities by those who speculate on the stock market."

Note—Congressman Combs is the man who had the courage and perseverence to run against former Congressman Martin Dies of the Un-American Activities Committee and defeat him.

Ike's Political Party

It is well known that General Eisenhower is the secret choice of certain high-placed Republicans to be the GOP candidate in 1952. Such backers as Tom Watson of International Business Machines are definitely grooming him.

However, it appears that Eisenhower—who, as a youngster in Abilene, Kans. registered as a Democrat—has long wanted his political affiliation kept secret.

Neighbors of General Eisenhower tell how he and his wife went to vote in a little tearoom near Columbia University last year. As Mrs. Eisenhower started to register, she was asked if she wanted to sign the usual registration blank enrolling her in one of the political parties. Mrs. Eisenhower started to accept the blank, but the general stopped her.

"Why can't I state my party preference?" Mrs. Eisenhower asked. "Since I am voting for one party?"

"I just don't think it is wise," Eisenhower protested. "I wish you wouldn't do it."

Mrs. Eisenhower said she didn't understand.

The general smiled and said: "You will in time."

Frank Senator

It isn't often that a Senator will argue openly against Government economy. No matter what he may think personally, he knows that Government economy is a big vote-getter. However, Big Ed Johnson, Colorado Democrat, solemnly warned the other day against too much economizing at the expense of Democratic principles.

"We do not establish Governments to save dollars; we establish Governments so that the people may govern," Big Ed told his Senate colleagues.

"The planners say that if big business was run like Government, it would be bankrupt overnight," continued the Senator from Colorado. "Now that is a pretty plausible argument, and every uniformed person the country over swallows it and repeats it. Well-meaning propaganda groups throughout the country play that tune. I concede, in fact, that our Government is more wasteful and more inefficient than a streamlined dictatorship, and that its operating efficiency does not look good when placed alongside that of a smooth-working, private American business organization.

"But is that what we are striving for?" boomed Johnson. "Are we forgetting that we are trying to maintain a Democratic system of representative Government here in America? All of us, I am sure, would have no hesitation in choosing between a highly efficient administration by a dictator in a totalitarian state and a less efficient administration under the checks and balances of democracy.

"The American businessman and the American worker must understand the kind of cake that is hidden under the pretty frosting," Johnson warned.
